Minden teenager is still in coma

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A Minden teenager is in critical but stable condition in Toronto General Hospital after his car skidded sideways into a truck on October 6.

Jarett Gentle, a 16-year-old, Grade 11 student at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, is breathing on his own but is still in a coma, says OPP Staff Sgt. Steve Adam. Primary injuries are to his head.

Gentle had safely returned by motorcycle to his home on South Lake Road, after playing in a football game at the high school. He was on his way to pick up a friend at 4:45 p.m. when, for some unknown reason, his car hit a truck operated by Frederick Hartwick of R.R. 1 Minden.

Some people believe Jarett might have been temporarily blinded by the setting sun, but Sgt. Adam says until Jarett regains consciousness, cause of the accident will be unknown.

"Any time there's an accident like this it shakes people up," says HHSS Principal Peter Forgrave. "The students are very concerned about it and now it's a case of trying to get accurate information on how Jarett is doing. Part of the struggle at the school is to find out what the true situation is."

Forgave says the accident has also made the other teenagers more aware that driving is not simply hopping in a car and heading for a destination. "It brings real life into focus."

Concerns about hospital to be aired at meeting

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The public will be given the opportunity to express its support of the proposed 18-bed continuing care unit at a meeting with MPP John Eakins some time in early November.

A committee of concerned citizens is organizing the meeting. A time and place will be announced later.

Everyone who is concerned about the Ministry of Health's refusal to let the project go to tender is invited to attend. In addition, all interested individuals and organizations are asked to make written submissions which can then be directed to Elinor Caplan, minister. Officials from her minister are to also attend the meeting.

In a letter dated August 15, 1986, then-Health Minister Murray Elston wrote "It gives me great pleasure to inform you that your 18 chronic care beds have been awarded to your hospital to be established at the Haliburton Unit, and to authorize commencement of plans for this initiative."

"May I take this opportunity to extend best wishes as you proceed with plans for new and improved services for the residents of Haliburton and area."

The letter was addressed to the chairman of the board of St. Joseph's General Hospital, which owns both the Haliburton and Minden Hospitals.

Since that time, the county's permanent and seasonal residents have raised $400,000 as the public's portion of the cost, with county government also guaranteeing at least that amount. However, the ministry is now funding a study which will investigate whether the beds are really needed. It is expected to take six to eight months to complete the study.

The cost of the unit is now estimated at $250,000 a bed. The government will pay two-thirds of the cost, Haliburton County the rest.

What worries the committee is that if delays continue, the price of the new unit will be greater than the community can afford.

Haliburton County might be the only jurisdiction in the province without continuing care beds. As well, although patients will be of all ages, the county has the province's highest percentage of senior citizens and seniors will make up the majority of patients.

Right now, patients are spending their days in Lindsay, Peterborough or Toronto, which makes visiting difficult for friends and family. Recent ministry reports have all stressed the importance of keeping people as close to their homes as possible.

The meeting is not intended to be a diatribe against Eakins. Instead, people are asked to air their opinions and concerns—and anger, but in a way which will be constructive.

Lynn Craigmyle will be chairman of the meeting and anyone wishing to present written submissions early can drop them off at the Bowes and Cocks office in Haliburton.

Divers chastised for not notifying Stanhope earlier

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The diver who found 60 barrels submerged in Little Hawk Lake should have notified authorities sooner, say Stanhope councillors, who also wish they had been contacted before the media was.

"If he was so concerned about the environment, then why didn't he pick up a phone and call the Ministry (of the Environment) and the township," said Deputy-reeve Ann Barker at last Wednesday's council meeting.

She was referring to David Lumley, president of the Stouffville Underwater Diving Society. On a recreational dive on September 2, club members found the 60 barrels, in various stages of decay, off the Stanhope lake's shore. However, it wasn't until a few weeks later that Lumley sent a letter about the discovery to the Toronto Sun, The Minden Times, the MOE and Transport Canada.

"We feel that a possible health risk to the residents and visitors to the area, who drink and bathe in the water and consume the fish, should be investigated, under the possibility that this was the midnight dumping of a truckload of dangerous substances or even just the misuse of empty, but not cleaned or purged containers," the letter said in part. Lumley also writes of how

Snowdon residents stand united against rezoning

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Anger has turned to determination as a group of Snowdon residents plan to form an association to fight a proposed salvage yard in Gelert.

"We don't want this salvage yard in our environment... and we have no one to talk for us," says Stan Farrell, who along with his wife Jean, is organizing the residents association.

Bill Linnington, who owns 21 acres fronting County Road 1, has applied to rezone the property to allow for a salvage yard. Concerns about environmental hazards, such as run off into the Drag River, would be addressed, he says, by building underground tanks. Once 300 vehicles are on site, a company will take them away to be crushed. Council has given the application second reading.

These assurances have done nothing to appease many residents' disapproval of the plan. At a recent meeting, approximately 40 people were there to speak out against it.

But the Farrells believe a unified voice will be the loudest, and so far, says Mr. Farrell, they've received a lot of support.

"We're not happy with the council," says Mr. Farrell, and if approval is given, the residents are prepared to take the case to the Ontario Municipal Board. "We'll go as far as we can to prevent it."

Mr. Farrell isn't sure whether the group will disband after the salvage yard issue is settled. Should the group stay together, "if other things come up at least we have a fighting chance."

"The sad thing is the salvage yard has dragged on for two and a half years and the residents are behind on their reaction," says Reeve George Simmons, who is glad to see residents getting involved.

"Maybe Canadians are starting to question," Simmons says. "We used to be so complacent. Really if they get 500 (people to join the association) they've done a good thing for Snowdon—council becomes important to them. Involvement is a resource that's sometimes not tapped."

The only problem Simmons has with the association is that individual

Healthy trees to remain at 12 Mile Lake cemetery

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A number of trees at 12 Mile Lake Cemetery must be removed because of stricter regulations, Minden council has been told.

The Minden Cemetery Board has been considering the removal of pine trees because some are unhealthy and more space is needed at the cemetery. But this has angered a number of local residents. Council heard a plea last Wednesday from Marilyn Mighton who requested that the "healthy trees and natural setting be preserved and protected."

Mighton suggested to council the pine trees—some of which are about 100 years old—could be left if the nearby plots were designated for cremation remains only. Over the past 15 years, cremation has become more popular, and 25 per cent of people choose this type of burial, she said.

"A cemetery is for the living, as well as for the people resting there," said Mighton, who had two questions for council: What are the plans for the cemetery, and what input can people have at preserving it?

Ministry thinks sunken barrels are from docks

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The more than 60 barrels found in Little Hawk Lake were probably from underneath floating docks, says a Ministry of the Environment director.

Bill Howden says it is unlikely the barrels were dumped there by the companies who produced the barrels and their contents. "At this point, we're assuming they were put there from the docks."

However the barrels, which are in various states of decay, should not be left to rot in a lake, no matter who puts them there, Howden says.

"We've moved beyond the era when things are disposed of in that manner," he says. In the past unwanted items such as fridges, cars and not to mention barrels often were conveniently disposed of in the bottom of lakes. No one was as environmentally aware as they are today.

Within the next few weeks, the MOE hopes to hire a contractor to take the barrels, some of which weigh hundreds of pounds, out of the lake. They will be tested on site and, if Howden is right that there was no foul play intended, will be taken to the Halls Lake dump.

YOUNG OFFENDERS CHARGED

Over the past week police have investigated three thefts in the Haliburton village area. The responsible persons who have since been charged were all Young Offenders. The thefts were unrelated and items stolen were all vehicles.

INJURY ACCIDENTS

On Oct. 12, at Hwy. 35 and Newcastle St., George Kerr of Stanhope Tp. was driving south bound. As he approached the intersection, he collided with a vehicle operated by Bryan Kernohan of Minden. Both drivers were taken to Minden Hospital. Kernohan has been charged with Failing to yield.

On Oct. 12 at Hwy. 35 south of Deep Bay Rd. David Lehman of Newmarket was north bound when he went off the road on the east side then crossed to the west side where he collided with a rock cut.

Lehman was taken to Minden Hospital and has been charged with Careless driving.

On Oct. 13 at Cty. Rd. 1 south of Cty. Rd. 18, Scott McKee of Haliburton was north bound when he lost control of his vehicle and went into the ditch. McKee and passenger were taken to hospital. Charges are pending in this accident.

SEAT BELT MYTHS

Myth: In a crash it is almost always safer to be thrown out of the car.

The FACTS are, that the chances of being fatally injured almost 25 times greater if you're thrown from the car than if you are safely buckled in your seat. If your aren't wearing your safety belt you could be: Thrown through a windshield; thrown into trees, rocks or other cars; scraped along the ground or pavement or run over by your own car or another car.

disturbing is was "to encounter a situation where an irresponsible person might have caused the destruction of our environment, which brings me to the reason for writing this letter."

"(The diving club) just wanted advertising. They weren't concerned about the environment. If they were they would have picked up the damned phone" and called the MOE and the township office, said Barker.

"The first call we had was from the Sun," said acting clerk Marvel

Eager, commenting on how the township first learned the barrels were there. The office and councillors received several inquiries about the barrels but they didn't have any information until the MOE filled them in.

Councillor Fred Gardner said he had seen the barrels in the water this summer while boating.

"All we were trying to do was make people aware of it but we could have done the opposite," said Lumley, contacted at his home in Sandford on Monday.

Lumley says that after the barrels were found—and 60 is a conservative estimate, he adds—the club did not meet until September 11. Members discussed what to do, but weren't sure if there find was significant. In the end, "we thought we should let someone know."

There was no intention to delay sending letters to the various authorities, Lumley said, but he wasn't able to get around to it until September 22. Since then, he's heard nothing from the MOE about their findings.

"I still doubt the barrels were all off the docks," Lumley says. "There would have to be an awful lot of dock to support the number of barrels."

Ride for Sight to return despite concerns of OPP

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

With overwhelming positive response from residents of Anson, Hindon and Minden, the Ride For Sight—which brought about 5,000 motorcyclists to the area this summer—will return to the municipality next year.

During its September 14 meeting, councillor Mike Maher questioned whether the fundraising event has outgrown the Minden area. Since only Maher, councillor Bob Sisson and Deputy Reeve Bern Berry were in attendance at the meeting, the decision whether to allow Ride For Sight next year was held over. Since that time, the township has received a flood of responses, approximately three to one in favour of the event.

Reeve Ray Moore read a statement on his feelings saying the benefits of the two-day event—which raises money retinitis pigmentosa research, and also promotes the area—outweigh problems such as noise, street blockages, policing costs and "the few isolated incidents that have taken place." Moore said the event helps "to eliminate the perceived cultural vision of motorcyclists." He made three points in considering criticisms against Ride For Sight.

"Firstly, policing costs are not, in my opinion, a negative. If we are not receptive to such an event, an event which raised over $1-million for R.P. research, then some other community will be, and we will lose the opportunity to show off the OPP Golden Helmets, the OPP RIDE program, and the exposure of our community through the media to thousands of potential tourists.

"Secondly, the service clubs of our community derive new, outside dollars to help with community projects now and in the future. The value of this one event is phenomenal to all participating clubs, and extends to the churches and CHACE Place.

"Thirdly, but a most important aspect of this event, is the stimulation of our local economy in June, for those people in the food, fuel, entertainment and accommodation sectors. Jobs are created, taxes and bills get paid, as money is brought into this community which may otherwise go elsewhere.

"It is my opinion that it is our responsibility as a council to listen to all input, weigh the positives and the negatives, and make our decision solely on this basis. We cannot allow a vocal minority to sway our judgement."

At $436,000, Minden's event on June 10 raised nearly half of the $918,000 raised Canada-wide in 19 separate rallies.

Event chairman Syd Collier was in attendance, and asked whether council has looked into ways of avoiding problems at Minden's Fair Grounds. A $160,000 addition of a ball diamond (including washroom facilities and a playground, which council feels should be protected), will take up space on the lower grounds which bikers have used for camping during the event.

Also, it is possible construction will be underway at the Minden arena at the time of next year's rally, so participants wouldn't have access to those washroom facilities.

Maher told Collier the soonest date an ad hoc committee could meet to discuss these concerns was on October 13, so they had not yet been addressed at the time of the council meeting.

Still, response to the event last week was extremely positive. Deputy Reeve Bern Berry mentioned a petition signed by 22 residents of Stanworth Court and Stanworth Terrace seniors' apartments, which is situated close to the Fair Grounds, shows support for bringing the event back.

Ann Barker, who is Deputy Reeve of Stanhope Township council, said she recently purchased property in Minden. "I'm not here as a councillor, I'm here as a taxpayer." Speaking in favour of the event, Barker said when Stanhope bid for Ride For Sight and lost to Minden, "we were disappointed. I would be very upset that such a worthy cause is going to be lost."

Barker then compared the event to the Highland Games, which Minden bid for but lost out to Dysart et al. "Five-thousand people may seem a little excessive, but earlier (during the bid for the games, Minden) was prepared to go to 10,000," she said.

"There's a big difference between pipes under your arm and pipes on a motorcycle," said Maher.

"You are discriminating," Barker said, to which Maher answered, "I may be discriminating, but I have good reason." Maher pointed out he lives right in town and is directly affected by problems such as noise which arise from the event.

"I have a motel next to me and its right next door to the Harleys," said Barker. Anyone who lives in an area where accommodations are provided are affected by the event, she said.

Resident Irene Moore, who was selling tickets to purchase a bus for Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home during the June 10 weekend, also spoke out for the event and praised members may lose their voice. "I prefer, as long as it doesn't get into defamation of character, for a person to voice his opinion himself."

Apology

The Echo regrets any confusion which may have arisen as a result of recent stories on a challenge to Maurice Bradley's position as reeve on Cardiff council. The Echo also apologizes for any embarrassment these stories may have caused Bill Davies of Cardiff.

Because the Apsley OPP are still investigating the matter, the Echo will not comment further on the case until the police resolve the issue.

Simmons says if the association wants to sway the decision-making process, it must do its footwork and come up with concrete reasons against the proposal, perhaps based on other municipality's decisions. "They've got to do their homework."

Even if council doesn't approve the rezoning, the proposal could still go to the OMB, Simmons says. Linnington has just as much right to voice disagreement over a decision as the residents do.

"We just can't say because 50 people come into the community hall (in protest) we can turn this around," Simmons says.

He will be at the association's first meeting which is scheduled for October 25 at 7p.m. at the Gelert Town Hall.

STANDING TALL: The Red Pines at the 12 Mile Lake cemetery must be cut down because of decay caused by improper soil conditions, the AHM cemetery board says. The White Pines, however, will be allowed to remain and local Boy Scouts will plant more of them in the spring. Many people will be sad to see the trees go.

County has no enforcement funds

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

For the county to draw up rules governing use of the abandoned railroad corridor, it must be able to enforce them. And therein lies one of its major problems.

"If you're going to set regulations, you've got to have someone to regulate them," says George Simmons, chairman of the county's corridor development committee. This year's $10,000 budget has already been spent on culverts and guard rails, leaving the committee bereft of any means to hire an enforcement officer.

Perhaps it's time for the county to consider hiring a by-law enforcement officer, says Simmons. If they county isn't willing to, "who kicks in" the money?

Simmons was responding to Godfrey Tyler's letter in last week's Echo which says the county did not address adjacent property owners' concerns before allowing access onto the corridor. At a public meeting last winter, the overwhelming sentiment was snowmobiles should be granted access in the winter, but there should be no motorized vehicles (except for maintenance and special-permit ones) on the trail when there's no snow.

"I fear people might get antagonistic about all motorized vehicles" if problems aren't dealt with soon, says Tyler. This summer cars and all-terrain vehicles have been using the trail, and it is expected hunters will use it as well. All the county has to do to prevent this is place applicable signs at all the access points, he says.

Tyler doesn't want the county to give the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association a land use permit until everything else is dealt with. Although not against snowmobiles using the corridor, Tyler says "it's in the best interest of the snowmobile association to get this mess sorted out."

"I fear people might get antagonistic about all motorized vehicles. That would pit people along the corridor against councils and everything would deteriorate. The whole thing is I don't want it to get too far. My letter was a polite on the cemetery board, said Peter Hynard of the Ministry of Natural Resources had been contacted to look at the trees. Of the three red pines near the cemetery's fence, one is definitely dead and will have to be removed, while the other two are in a serious state of health decline. Some maples along a back fence will be removed so a road can be put in, added Sisson.

"We too feel we need the pine trees," he continued. "They do make the setting." But caretaker George Johnson must also consider what's good for the cemetery. "He's trying to make room out of what little room he has," Sisson said.

Hynard then gave council a clearer understanding of his assessment of the area trees. Through soil samples, Hynard learned gravel in a cobble bed two feet from the surface is the cause of deteriorating pine trees.

In a suggestion to the cemetery board, Hynard said white pines could be planted to replace some of the red pines which will inevitably die because of inappropriate soil conditions. The boy scouts have already been contacted and agree to do the planting and fertilization next spring.

White pine is more tolerant of nearby digging, said Hynard, providing there is a 10-foot setback from each tree.

With concerns about the trees which will be removed to improve access the cemetery, Ms. Mighton asked how often the hearse would go through the area.

"Marilyn, only God can tell you that," responded funeral director Gord Monk who added, "We just can't turn on a dime with a hearse."

Cemetery board members "are trying to develop an orderly system of plots," said Monk. "And we have to develop a system of roads where we can get to these plots."

Once controlled by the Ministry of Health, cemeteries are now under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations "which pay more attention to details than the health ministry ever did," said Monk. "They're going to clamp down and they're going to clamp down very hard."

Two items stressed by the MCCR are safety rules in cemeteries and regulations about where tombstones can be placed.

"It's not all that easy anymore," said Monk. "What we did 10 years ago, we can't do today. Now there are specific regulations on roadways and entries. That's where it's at."

Monk also disputed Mighton's figures on cremation, saying it accounts for 11 per cent of burials. "My cremation figures are about 9 per cent per year with relatively no growth," he said.

Sisson told Mighton 15 trees were marked after the board "decided we had to expand the cemetery." Not all the marked trees will be removed, and with the re-planting project, "I'm sure you'll be pleased with what happens," he added.

"New trees and little roadways are very nice, but they don't maintain a natural setting," said Mighton.

"We're coming into the '90s and we need to have progress," said

Sisson. "Knowing George (Johnson), it will look nice when it's done."

Reeve Ray Moore commended Mighton for her presentation. "I think you've done a good service for the community... I think the trees are beautiful and we'll try to preserve them as long as we can." He said council recognizes her concerns, but "we're trying to upgrade our cemeteries because we're forced by law to do so."

Fred Chappel, who signed the agreement to have the cemetery taken over by the township this spring, then spoke in support of the changes. Previously, 12 Mile Lake Cemetery was cared for by volunteers, but this was found to be insufficient. The board also controls the Minden and Bethel Church cemeteries.

"Our interest (is in) saving our cemeteries," said Chappel. "The markings were a concern with me as well. We want to ensure that the flavour of a cemetery that is 100 years old continues."

Chappel is pleased with Johnson's upkeep of the cemetery. "With all the arrows being slung around, there are lots of laurels and George deserves them."

Stanhope unhappy with road

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Stanhope council is not happy with the quality of hard-topping recently put on St. Peter's Road.

"I've had people say to me 'If that's the finished product then I think you've got ripped off,'" said Councillor Eleanor Harrison at last Wednesday's council meeting.

Harrison lives on the road which was recently hard-topped by Miller Paving, in conjunction with the county's road department. She says

"the seams are really bad—they're not overlapped" and there are places where holes will probably form in the spring.

"I wasn't quite satisfied with it myself," said township Roads Superintendent, Harold Barjarow.

"If it doesn't look good in the spring, we'll get after them," said Reeve Harry Davis.

On Monday, County Roads Superintendent Bill Everson said council had not contacted him about the matter but he would be making an inspection of the work later this week.

Developer says neighbours' fears of flooding addressed

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A townhouse complex proposed off of Prince Street will be allowed if Minden Council approves a drainage report to be supplied by the developer.

Richard Milewski heard residents' concerns about his proposed development of 20 townhouses during a public input meeting last Wednesday night. Although he doesn't yet own the property, Milewski says a deal to purchase from John Kernohan would close if he gets the rezoning. A new road would be built off Prince Street where the townhouses would sit in two rows. Milewski plans to pre-sell the townhouses, and says the earliest start-date for construction is next spring.

The development "would be very good in that area," said Milewski. "It's close to town and provides affordable townhouses."

Drainage and road problems topped the list of people's concerns, along with a creek which runs through the property.

Resident Carol Emmerson said any construction would require a substantial amount of fill, affecting spring runoff on her property.

She also heard the creek will be diverted from its natural bed. "How are you going to do that?" she asked. Access to the lot was another worry. Mrs. Emmerson asked if one driveway is enough to access the development.

Councillor Lewis Stevens said one driveway adequately services all houses on Mackay Street.

Mrs. Emmerson then asked how the area would be affected by the townhouses since it is designated as flood fringe.

By following an engineer's report, Milewski said a catch basin and trenches dug around the property would allow for proper drainage and flood control.

Mrs. Emmerson asked if Milewski has approached an engineer to see if the proposal is feasible or not. At present, "we all have problems with drainage, so anything that adds to that would create a bigger problem."

"That's why I'm going to have the engineers design the trench and catch basin," said Milewski.

To the south, the proposed development abuts the Clergy House property on South Water Street, owned by Stan Blears. Blears said any drainage travels down the creek which runs through his property, and the adding of fill would cause this problem to increase.

Irene Moore said her house and driveway are situated directly across from the proposed development. "I've lived there for 50 years and I just can't see a driveway for 20 houses coming in there," she said. "We've all had drainage problems with our driveways and you're going to have trouble, too."

Reeve Moore said all the houses must be built above a "benchmark" figure of 27 metres. And "that's his problem, not ours."

"You can say all you want about ditches, but I don't think it'll work," said Mrs. Moore. "I don't see how council could pass it when there's people here who don't want it changed."

Reeve Ray Moore reminded residents their comments would be considered along with the development proposal, "so now's the time to voice them. We want you to get after Richard about the concerns you have." Whether council approves or disproves the rezoning, residents have 20 days to appeal, he said.

A second and third reading of the rezoning bylaw was recommended by Moore, suggesting the third and final reading would depend upon a drainage report to be supplied by Milewski.

"We have to recognize the concerns of our people," he said, adding to Milewski. "We don't want to stall you or delay you" but a drainage report should "solve the major problem that seems to be of concern."

"I'd like to get some idea of what

Bob Lake residents make road plea

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Concerned over Minden council's decision to discontinue maintenance on Bob Lake Road, representatives of the Bob Lake Cottagers' Association made a plea at last Thursday's council meeting.

President Ed Hisson and secretary Phyllis Wyper asked if anything could persuade council to authorize roads superintendent Clayton Cameron to resume service on the 0.6 km stretch of road, which council decided was too narrow to allow safe maintenance.

Residents and cottagers "have benefited for many years from the excellent service provided by the roads department," Wyper read from a letter. "Others, more recently joining this cottage community have been impressed and appreciative of the ease with which they have been able to access their cottages in summer or winter. Many take advantage of the opportunity to be in Minden most weekends and many weeks of the year."

The association's letter acknowledges the "difficulties encountered by Mr. Cameron and his crews as they attempted to service our road, especially in the winter."

Wyper and Hisson asked what the association could do to have the road maintenance resumed.

"It's nice to hear our roads superintendent is doing a good job," said Deputy Reeve Bern Berry. "We seldom hear praise anymore." Berry then suggested if the municipality owned a wide enough stretch of road to make it safe for crews to use the equipment, maintenance would not have been stopped.

"If we could have land dedicated to us," council might consider resuming maintenance, he said.

Reeve Ray Moore pointed out there have been problems with cars parked too close to the road to allow road equipment safely through. Since these people are parked on their own property, council can't force them to move their cars.

Hisson said the property-owner in question has offered to find other parking arrangements. The reeve said council would require a letter confirming this.

Wyper said it was her impression that once any maintenance is done by the municipality, it automatically has assumed responsibility for the road. Berry said it's "a matter of interpretation."

Reeve Moore lamented that the world is changing, forcing the municipality to protect itself against lawsuits. "When we were younger, people were a lot easier. Neighbours were neighbours. Today people say, 'that's my bloody property and you ain't going to cross it,'" he said, adding "it's a mess."

Berry pointed out the road standards demanded by the Ministry of Transportation are getting more strict.

Wyper and Hisson said they will look into both the parking problem and the matter of land dedication, but council said no promises could be made as to whether maintenance will resume if these items are straightened out.

Pilots won't be charged for landing at Stanhope

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Two pilots who landed illegally on Stanhope Airport's unfinished runway will not be charged.

Although the runway closure is well marked, former Safety Officer Derek Rolfe told Stanhope council on Wednesday that two planes have already used the newly paved strip. The airport has been closed since spring to allow upgrading of the runway and airport facilities, using provincial and federal grants.

When Rolfe approached the first pilot, "I found the fellow to be abusive. I don't think he realized the predicament he put the airport in," said Rolfe.

"I was going to lay charges against him but yesterday a government (Ministry of Transport) plane flew in. How can you charge one without charging the other?" Rolfe asked.

During the airport construction, Rolfe said helicopters have been using the airport in emergency situations. "People are anxious to use the runway. It's been a willy nilly situation we have to tolerate."

As well, Rolfe said he was having trouble tracking down the registration of the first plane because of a new micro-fiche system which makes finding information harder than the old book method.

Stanhope township will probably remove the large dumpsters placed outside its dumps.

Council is concerned that people dump their garbage into the bins instead of becoming accustomed to new dump hours. Early this past summer, Stanhope gated and manned its dumps to control dumping and ensure no hazardous wastes were being left. Unfortunately, ratepayers were not given sufficient notice and there was a problem of too much garbage being placed in the dumpsters instead of the dump.

New dump summer hours will be established by February, so notice can go out in tax bills, along with an explanation of why gating was necessary.

reminder to hurry up and deal with the corridor properly."

Snowmobiles have traditionally used the corridor, Simmons says, so it would be difficult to cut off their access. Besides that, snowmobiles are not the problem. And in the spring discussion, no timetable was ever established about when the policies would be in place.

Simmons says that in Snowdon, where he is reeve, he's under pressure to turn parts of the corridor into roads. His own priority is to build washrooms at Ritchie Falls, a beautiful spot along the corridor, and put in a concealed well at the spring to provide fresh drinking water.

Whatever is done first next spring, Simmons says "patience on all sides is a must."

Park's wolf-trapping rule only now being enforced

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Algonquin Park officials are simply enforcing old policies by forbidding the trapping of wolves in Clyde, Bruton and Eyre townships, says the park's assistant supervisor. "It stipulated in the 1974 Master Plan that wolves not be trapped or harvested," says Gerry Cox. "Up until now, it's something we've overlooked."

At last Tuesday's Dysart et al council meeting, it was mentioned that local trappers are upset they are no longer allowed to trap wolves in the one area of the park traditionally open for trapping. Bounties are no longer offered for the pelts, but trappers like to cull the wolves to protect the beavers which they do trap for pelts.

The park decided to enforce the 1974 rule, Cox says, because a research biologist's study was being hampered when radio-collared wolves were being killed in traps.

"It takes a considerable amount of time and effort to live-trap a wolf and put a radio collar on it," Cox says. The biologist is tracking wolf packs and recording their actions to better understand the relationships between predators (the wolf) and prey (deer, moose and beaver).

Wolves are also a major attraction at the park in July and August. People gather to hear wolves respond to a staff member's howls, which is very popular along the Highway 60 corridor.

Two trappers who have lines in the park, Garth Henderson and Keith Hughes, were moose hunting and unavailable for comment.

Machine not the answer

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Trustees with the Haliburton County Board of Education aren't sure if an answering machine will properly inform Victoria Street School staff about absent students.

A motion to install an extra phone line for a machine at the school was defeated at last month's board meeting when trustees didn't agree on how the matter of absent students should be handled. Some felt the school should contact parents if children don't show up; others felt full responsibility of providing this information should be left to parents.

"You shouldn't leave a teacher hanging," wondering whether parents are aware their child is absent when the school isn't contacted, said Len Salvatori.

"It's not our responsibility to phone parents if their kids aren't in school," countered Leroy Eager.

"Are we a babysitting service or an educational service?" asked Linda Mumford, who later suggested most parents will alert the schools if their children are absent. "Parents are pretty responsible. They don't take their kids out for good reason."

Ed de Grosbois said problems could occur if parents forget to use the answering machine service, or if the machine doesn't work. "It's not a failsafe program."

Education Director Stuart Baker will perform a follow-up to provide more information at the next board meeting.

John Con-sack, Master of Haliburton's Loyal Orange Lodge No. 975, right, presents a cheque for $4,000 to committee treasurer Merrill Bailey. The money, raised by the lodge's bingo games, brings the campaign total to $8,400. The target is $35,000 to buy a bus for the physically challenged.

Log home can be display

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Minden council has decided to allow the display use of a log home built next to the Westside Jug City.

Nick Judge approached council last Wednesday to request rezoning and official plan amendment to allow the display, sale, planning and limited construction of log homes. Limited construction, he said, refers only to the construction of his log home, which is already close to completion. Any building work will be done on a customer's site.

Councillor Lewis Stevens pointed out that Judge only recently received a building permit for his log home, and "you can practically move into it."

"I'm surprised the building is there, yet the permit is only in now," said Stevens.

Judge informed council he was granted permission to build without a permit by the former building inspector, Brad Bradamore, who was fired by council on August 10.

Stevens continued, saying if Judge built without a permit then he might not abide by restrictions within the property's zoning and official plan. "From past experience, it doesn't make any difference what you're required to do, you'll do it anyway."

Judge's partner, Al Reid, said when "we went to the building inspector, he said 'I'm swamped with work,' and told us to go ahead." Reid says. "Brad Bradamore was there several times" to inspect the property.

"I think we all realize we've had a problem with our past bylaw officer," Deputy Reeve Bern Berry told Stevens. "I agree with your questions, but we did have problems and hope we're on the road to straightening them out."

Berry also noted all commercial properties require a site plan approval, so any problems should be avoided.

Council voted in favour of the rezoning and official plan amendment. There is a 20-day appeal period before the property will be rezoned.

Centre fee waived for seniors' party

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Despite the concerns of some Minden council members, the municipality will bring a little Christmas cheer to area seniors with a decision to waive its arena rental fee for a party.

During last Thursday's meeting, council discussed a letter from Staunworth Court residents requesting a reduction in the cost of renting the arena for their Christmas party. Seniors from Minden's Sunrise Apartments would also be invited. Rental cost is about $125, council was told.

It was councillor Lewis Stevens who suggested the fee should be waived altogether. "I think it would be a good gesture if council, on behalf of the taxpayers, would show appreciation for our seniors in this way," he said.

Deputy Reeve Bern Berry strongly opposed the idea. He said residents of Staunworth Terrace have already received much support from the municipality, and cited a $1,000 donation toward the apartment's clock fund. "We're supposed to give 'till it hurts, but not until we bleed,'"

Reeve Ray Moore said most residents of the apartments have been life-long taxpayers and deserve a little support from the municipality. "If we can't give them a rental to a hall, then we're a pretty cheap council," Moore pointed out a reduced fee was charged when the Horticultural Society held its annual flower show at the community centre, "and I think these people deserve just as much."

Councillor Mike Maher suggested if the rental fee is waived, then council should insist residents from Sunrise Apartments be invited as well.

When councillors questioned whether the fee should be merely reduced or waived completely, Stevens suggested the municipality should "pay the full shot on behalf of the taxpayers to show appreciation for one of our most natural resources, and that's our senior citizens."

Sisson said he is not in favour of giving special treatment to the seniors. "When's it going to stop? If we're going to keep giving our arena away, then we can't afford to fix it." He suggested the townships of Stanhope and Lutterworth, which also support Staunworth apartments, should be asked to each chip in one-third of the cost.

Reeve Moore asked for a recorded vote with he, Stevens and Maher voting in favour of waiving the fee, and Berry and Sisson voting against.

Concerns

Mr. Milewski has planned," said Mrs. Emerson. "I wasn't planning when I moved in there for a roadway to go in behind me. I need a better idea before I can honestly say I have no objections."

"I don't want to stand here and object before I really know what's happening," she said. "I object to anything that will affect my property."

Council agreed to follow Moore's suggestion, and residents will be contacted once the drainage report is obtained.

Giving them the message

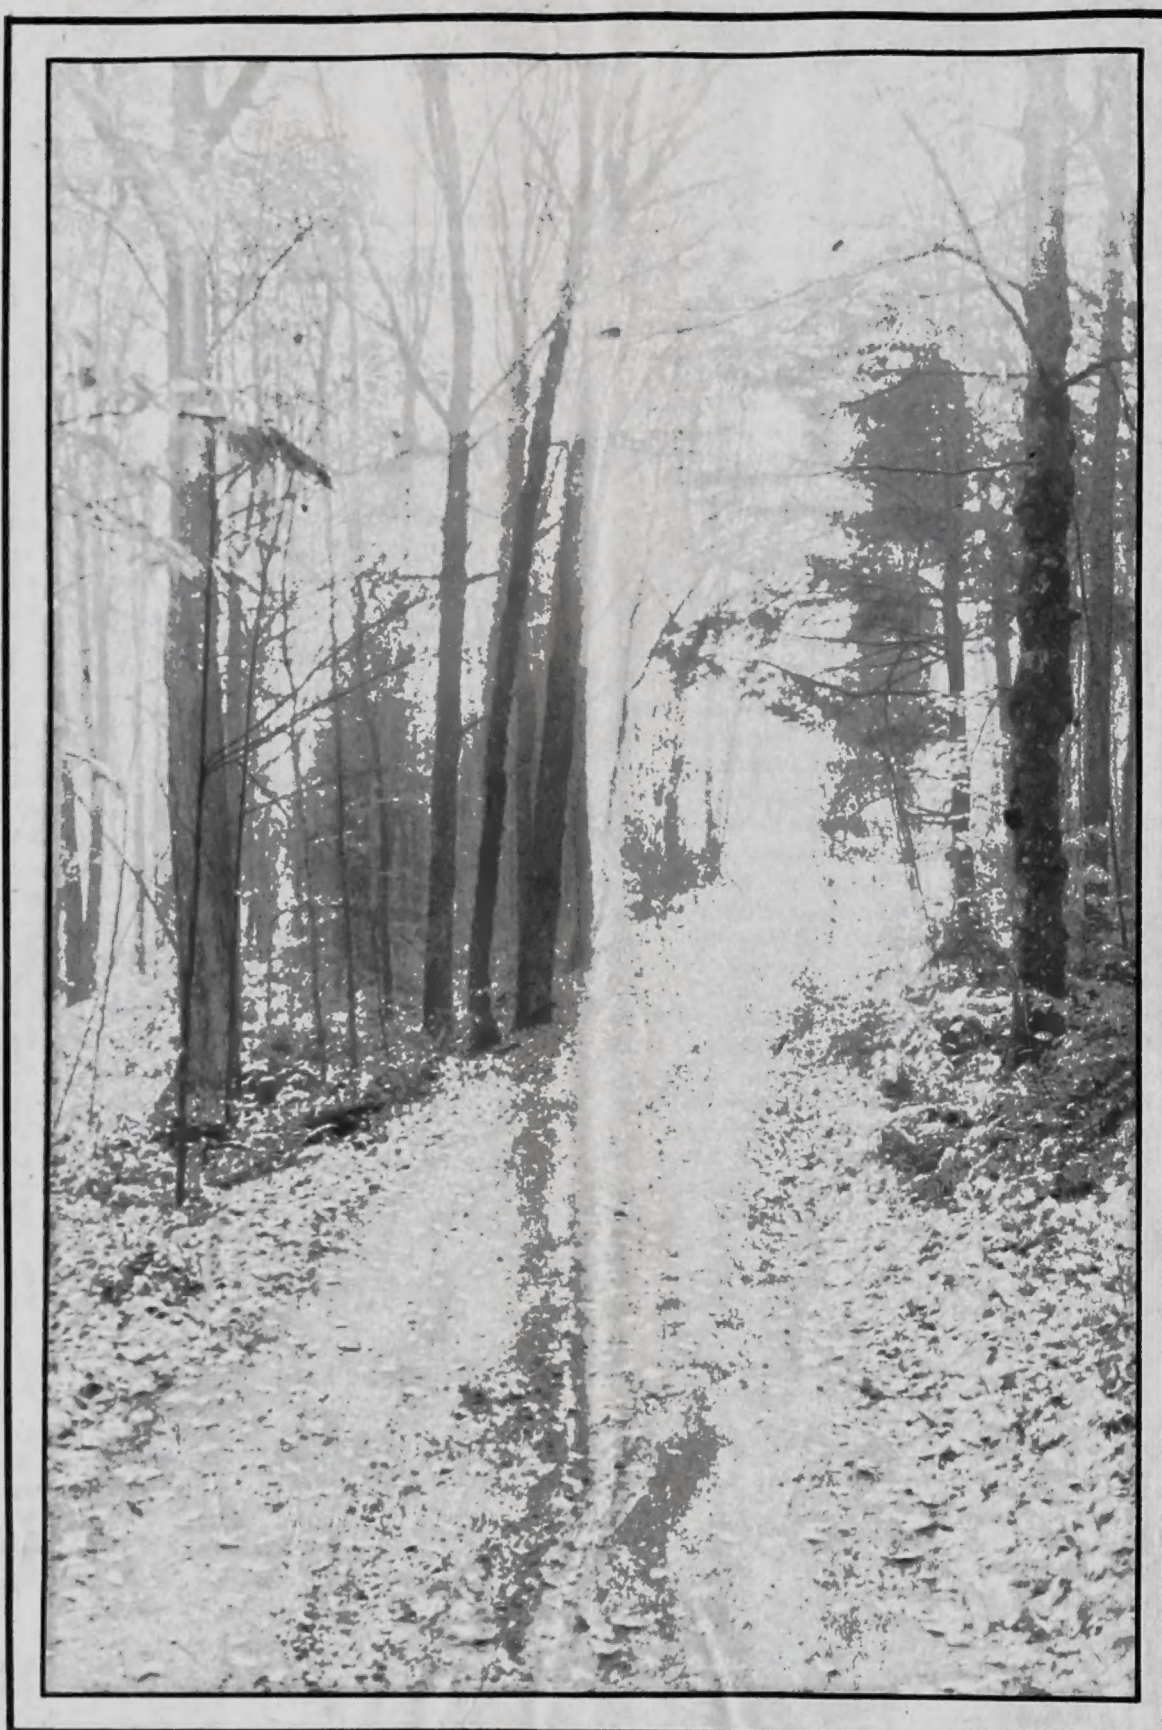

Sometime in early November (the date has not yet been chosen), MPP John Eakins will attend a public meeting in Haliburton to hear what the public thinks about the delay in funding the long-sought continuing care addition to Haliburton Hospital. Accompanying him will be representatives of Ontario's Ministry of Health. Minister Elinor Caplan is not expected to be among them, however, and that is truly unfortunate, for in her absence, Eakins will have to take responsibility for a decision he did not make, and apparently had little power to influence, even as a member of the cabinet.

Eakins has made it clear that he shares the community's disappointment and frustration, though not, perhaps, the depth of its anger, at the way the Haliburton continuing care addition has been handled. He has said the government "welched" on a commitment to the community, and he knows that the cynicism and contempt such treatment engenders will be difficult to overcome. In public, he has been compelled, if not to unshakably defend the government's handling of the hospital addition commitment, at least to suggest that Haliburton County is not alone in its unhappiness with the priorities of the Ministry of Health. In a more private forum, he has hinted that behind the veil of cabinet solidarity, disgruntled ministers are trying to put the brakes on David Peterson's headlong, headstrong march toward a more socialistic Ontario, a march that has been fed by an ever-growing deficit.

Were it not for the size of that deficit, it is probable that Haliburton Hospital long since would have had its continuing care wing. But when a government knows the disastrous consequences of continuing to spend more than it takes in, it feels justified in telling Haliburton County, and other communities, that hospital beds are a luxury we can do without. It is easier to disappoint and anger small communities far removed from Queen's Park, communities whose collective vote has almost no influence on the outcome of elections, than it is to address the problem of soaring expenditures by imposing cuts in programmes that are more broadly based. That may not be good management, but it is the reality of politics in Peterson's Ontario.

The irony of the Health Ministry's reluctance to fund the 18 new beds in Haliburton, even though they were promised in August, 1986, by the then minister Murray Elston, is that the need for those beds can never be eliminated. It may be possible to fund programmes that will keep people in their homes and out of hospitals longer, but no programme can alter the fact that some people ultimately require the services of a continuing care hospital. And as the population ages, the demand for those services will grow more, not less, acute. By delaying Haliburton project, the government is making it so costly that it may never be built. Already it is estimated that the unit will cost $250,000 a bed, almost triple the estimated cost when Elston granted his approval in 1986. Even if the Health Ministry decides to allocate the money — something everyone in the area continues to hope for — the community may not be able to come up with the money to fund its share. That may not be probable, but it is certainly possible, and if it happens, the fault will lie squarely on the collective shoulders of a government that has treated Haliburton County with something close to contempt in recent months.

The public meeting in November will not alter the Health Ministry's decision on the continuing care unit, but it is an opportunity for the community to unite in a forceful expression of support for the project, and of disappointment at the government's apparent contempt for the hopes and the sacrifices of people who have demonstrated a profound commitment, in time as well as money, to the future of their community. Eakins will listen and sympathize and try to assuage the community's anger. But will the message get back to Elinor Caplan, and if it does, will she care? Only time can answer those questions, but for the continuing care project, time may have all but run out.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

Are there really 70 members of this community living near the Northwood Inn who have signed Ed Fugar's petition which states that noise levels around the Inn are too high? Ed should be on the inside when the "Rabid Dogs" band is playing—it's a lot of fun!

This Inn used to be recognized as the Beaconbrook, an isolated hotel on the outskirts of town until homes started popping up around it. Music has been there for years. Why are the complaints happening now when a new owner with a new dream enters the scene and spends a fortune on obvious renovations inside and out, with future plans for upgrading and expanding? This effort and investment rewards our community with employment opportunities and much needed facility where people can relax or dance up a storm.

I like Ed Fugar and can sympathize with his problem but it hardly seems fair to be giving Mr. Maxwell of the Inn such bad press in the Echo with threats of court action. Mr. Maxwell has promised to make changes to accommodate community concerns so let's give the man and his staff a chance. I am impressed with what he has done so far. Like any new business, it takes some time to get the bugs out of the system and mold the new venture into the dream, so some patience on the part of the community would be in order at this time.

Thank you
Bob Barclay of the "Rabid Dogs"

IMAGINATIONS WERE CERTAINLY at work when county residents responded to the challenge of writing a fairy tale about a white swan. Not only was the number of responses gratifying, but the calibre of entrants was quite high.

This made judging difficult. There was something good about each story and you simply had to add up all the good points and balance them with any overwhelming negative ones.

Here are some of the comments about the entrants in general: Sometimes a story would start off exceedingly well but would flop at the ending, as if the writer didn't know exactly where she or he wanted the story to go and suddenly abandoned ship. Others were well written throughout, but didn't have a point to make. If it did have a moral, it might not convey a positive message to readers—beauty will earn you love and admiration, the dead may return to the living simply by wishing it to be (as judge Kathy Stouffer points out, even Sleeping Beauty was only sleeping when the prince brought her "back to life" with a kiss), good things come to those who smile a lot, and among our younger writers, all problems will be solved once you win the lottery.

It was the younger writers who gave the judges the most reading pleasure—and cause for concern. Their complicated plots, strange turns of event and colourful characters were a delight (although since none of the judges watch a lot of children's television programs, it was difficult to decide which stories were television-inspired.)

However, there were a few which were frightening in their violence or implied messages. Here are a few examples, using the spelling and grammar as submitted:

□A teenaged girl has a baby but it's not very cute so she gives it up for adoption.

□A boy invites a gang called the Cannibals to his 13th birthday party because he wants to join up. His initiation dare is to kill a white swan. Instead of reacting with horror, the boy wonders how he can do it without getting shot by the man who lives next door to the swans' home. "All night Gerry has

THE MONTH OF OCTOBER up to this point can be put down in history as a very nice month. We have had the odd wet day but the weather in most cases has been mainly sunny and warm. The coloured leaves have been out in all their brilliant colours and have been enjoyed by hundreds of visitors who have travelled back this way by car, truck and chartered busses. The months of September and October are usually the two nicest months of the year. If the weather co-operates, on some days you can still drop down to the park and have your lunch and rest while the sun keeps shining down. But through it all we must keep in mind that Christmas is about two months away and old man winter isn't too far off.

In local business news in Haliburton, the Grand Re-opening of the Haliburton IGA store is taking place today (Wednesday). The new addition is now open and the renovations are complete. Many changes have been made with an enlarges deli, grocery, meat, frozen and dairy departments. A new bakeshop has been added and the products now will be freshly bakes. Cordell Interiors have made major renovations and changes to the former Elstone Motors Sales Limited building on Highland Street and it won't be too much longer before they will be having their grand opening. Brad and Nancy Sales are to be congratulated on the may changes they have made to this building. Banks Heritage Store on Pine Avenue in Haliburton has added an addition to the store and the front is practically a carbon copy of the present front of their old store. In Minden they are moving right along with the new plaza which is located beside Keaney Plymouth Chrysler on the Minden by-pass and when completed it will be the home of many new business establishments. R. and R. Variety store which was located in the Valu-mart mall has moved to Main Street in Minden in the former Werner Electric building. Many renovations have been made to the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home and the new front on the building looks very attractive.

Speaking of building, it is expected that 600 workers will be on duty this Friday and Saturday, October 20 and 21 when the new Jehovah's Witness Hall will be constructed on the newly acquired property near the Allsaw Bridge approximately six miles from Haliburton. The foundation work and other smaller jobs have been completed and they tell me that the entire building will go up in two days. It will be worth your while to take a drive down and see the fast work that will be done on this project. The former Jehovah's Witness Hall is now up for sale.

Marion Sarginson, area Co-Ordinator for the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario, is happy to report that an enthusiastic group responded to the meeting held in Haliburton recently and they now have a steering committee. A Heart Smart Cooking Course is scheduled to start November 6. It will be presented by Rosie Kadwell, Dietician. More information is available by calling 457-1680. A speaker's bureau is almost ready to supply clubs and organizations with speakers. Ideas are exchanged on how to best launch a Campaign in February. Number one priority is to get local people involved and anyone willing to give 3-4 hours of their time to help fight Canada's No. 1 Killer can do so by calling the area office collect at 1-749-1044. The next meeting is October 25 at 1:30 PM at the Home Care Services—everyone welcome.

I was very interested when I noticed an article in a recent edition of the Toronto Star on Erin Nicholls, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George of West Guilford. According to the news item, it was just three years ago that Erin Nicholls lost the desire to play Junior Hockey. Today, the 19-year-old centre is one the Wexford Junior B Raiders, hoping for a college scholarship. He would be lying if he said he didn't want to follow in his brother's footsteps, Los Angeles Kings sharpshooter Bernie Nicholls. Bernie's success has had repercussions on Erin, who played high school hockey in Haliburton with the H.H.S.S. Redmen. Scouts have already turned up at Wexford practices, but Erin says his first big chance to be seen came at the annual College Weekend at St. Michael's College Arena recently. So far, the team has won seven and tied one in eight exhibitions games. "The hockey here is good," said Erin, a Grade 13 student. "It is a lot faster and has more talent than I have been used to." "Back home, teams would run him because Bernie is his brother," Erin says. "But they're just jealous."

Just a few notes: I understand that registration is up in the Haliburton Minor Hockey Association this year and that more players will be playing hockey on each team this winter... The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association's annual fundraising draw is for a brand new Yamaha Sno-Scoot... The new paint job and repairs on the train engine at the end of head Lake have been completed and we must say that it is a first-class job... Two new teams have been added to the Haliburton Men's Hockey League, Vasey Insurance and Ed Youngdale and Co.

THE OCTOBER ISSUE of the Reader's Digest arrived recently with red lettering on the front cover that said "Pull Me Out!" I found that amusing because that's the first thing I do when I get it — pull out all the cardboard inserts and return cards that make it impossible to turn the pages and read it.

The red heading turned out to be for one of their famous drama-in-real-life features. These, and the other contributory items are part of the important formula that has made the publication so successful.

The other part is to carefully cover a spectrum of topics that was set up by the founder, DeWitt Wallace, many years ago. There has been a running gag in the writing game over the years about coming up with an ideal Digest headline.

The winner in one contest was something like: "How I cured my arthritis and found God, after I made love to a bear for the FBI in Alaska," which covered health, religion, sex, animals, U.S. government, and travel — all on the master list of topics.

The formula goes back to 1920 when Wallace and his girl friend, Lila Bell Acheson, came up with the idea of condensing articles from the literally hundreds of magazines that had sprung up in the U.S. But they had trouble getting backers interested in their idea.

So they set up shop in New York City's then artsy and low-rent Greenwich Village, made up a sample article, and mailed it with a description of the magazine they envisioned to several thousand people on their wedding day, October 15th, 1921. When they returned from their honeymoon, they had letters from fifteen hundred charter subscribers at $3.00 each.

Issue number one came out in February of 1922, and the whole scheme was so successful that before long the other magazines, who had been happy to allow their articles to be used for the publicity, were now refusing the Wallaces the right to use their material.

They solved this at the time by commissioning articles by major writers, to be published by other magazines, but keeping the rights for reprinting for themselves.

The founders died in the 1980s, leaving their controlling stock to a trust, and a recent item reported that 10 percent of the stock is going on the market soon to comply with American tax laws. I am sure it will be snapped up.

It is the world's most-read magazine, they say, with over 28 million copies sold each month in 39 editions — and 15 languages. While it ran without ads over there until 1955, its arrival in Canada was financed by advertisers, beginning with a French version in 1947 and the one we read in 1948.

One of my own prized possessions pre-dates this. It is an October, 1944 edition, wearing a large banner "Printed in Canada," although it was quite obviously done so from American printing plates, and was likely done because of wartime restrictions to shipping or exporting scarce paper products.

Whatever the reason, it grabbed me when I bought it a few years ago because I recognized an article I had read as a boy. I don't think I have ever forgotten the title — "My Eyes Have a Cold Nose."

It was the story of a man who had gone blind, and how he had been trained to work with a guide dog — a fairly new concept at the time, though established longer in Switzerland where the concept had been developed.

I still think it is one of the greatest headlines I have ever read, and have often quoted it as a "grabber," along with my favorite advertising headlines, "Tin miners don't get pimples," and "You never saw a bald-headed sheep."

To explain briefly, one product touted the use of tin in a pimple cream, and the other lanolin in a hair preparation. The Digest article, of course covered two of Wallace's required topics — animals and medicine.

The lead article is an interview by the head of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce with Joseph Stalin, and there are naturally many war-related topics, including an article from "Saturday Night" in Toronto. There is even one looking ahead to the post-war sales boom expected for the auto industry.

There are articles from The Saturday Evening Post, Life, This Week, and many other publications that didn't survive the years. And yet if you check through the contents, the topics carefully cover all the bases on Wallace's master list — sex, religion, science, nature, travel and all the others.

In this world of 'new, improved' almost everything, it's sort of interesting to see how a truly good idea can stand up for nearly seventy years — unchanged.

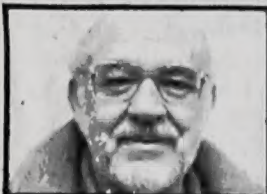

Pic of the Past

This must be the most frequently photographed corner in Haliburton Village. Approximately 75 years ago, Ethel Curry took her young sister, Vic, for a walk along the main street, stopping at the Maple Street intersection. The man was a traveller getting some water. The Lucas/Austin house is on the left and the town hall is at the end of the street.

A bitter man proffers the cup

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob Giuliano

THE ELDERLY PRIEST had slipped out of the sanctuary during the "Peace" and the singing of a hymn. The sermon was finished and folks were reading themselves for the Eucharist. He didn't come back. A younger priest began the offertory responses in a hesitant way, his eye on the door to the vestry.

Alarmed that my friend had gone out and suspecting that he was ill, I withdrew from my place and went to the vestry. When I opened the door and slid inside, I found the elderly man tangled in his vestments, sweat pouring down his face, which was as pale as a holy ghost.

"Bob", he said, tears welling up, "if I don't get out of this damn place soon, I'll be dead long before I retire!" He was full of bitterness. Years of faithful service had culminated in resentment and illness. Now he only hoped to endure until release from it all by way of a small pension.

As our eyes met there was understanding and acceptance of this fact of priestly life. It was sad that it had turned out this way but the truth was written large. No need denying it any longer. There had been too many disappointments. He had shared in too many sorrows and he had been battered, bruised and forgotten.

I tried to help him get out of the several layers of vestments that were tangled around his neck but soon discovered that he was working the other way. He was trying to get them back on. Finally, he explained that he had been overcome with heat, gone out to take "this stuff off" during the hymn to keep from fainting and now was going back to celebrate the Eucharist.

I tried to assure him that the other priest had things well under control and could complete the service, but my friend persisted. "I have to go back!" he said with an urgency that came from deep inside him.

It was a moment of sheer madness. The kind of madness that drives men and women on when they want to drop. It was the madness of a life time of serving God and God's people when it made absolutely no sense to do it. There was no reverie in preaching and no sense in caring. Your cup is empty.

I started helping him back into his priestly robes. He was a desperate man, but he was also a priest. The man no longer mattered. Bitter, nearly disgusted with life, he was tough to be around. But feeling didn't matter at this moment. Who he was didn't matter. The stuff he had bet his life on and which had so wounded and broken him was still the stuff of faith and it had to be done. It was all bigger, more real than the burned out heart that burdened him.

He wiped his sweating face with a flowing sleeve, punched me lightly on the chest and said, "Thanks Bob" as he went out the door to break the bread and pour the wine.

I waited awhile in the quiet of the vestry and heard his voice through the doors saying those words he had said for years and others before him for generations. "The gifts of God for the people of God!"

Soon I took my place at the communion rail. I usually stand, but that day I knelt and reached out my empty hands to the priest. His hands were shaking as he lifted the bread to each of us. "The Life of Christ", he said as he pressed the small symbol into my palm, "may the spirit which was in Him be in you also".

He moved on the next, and then the next. We sang "allelujah" and went out to "love and serve the world".

An inexplicable gift in action

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon
Lynch

'MY GRANDFATHER used to do this but for years I wasn't convinced," he said, standing with the steel rod in his hand. "My brother still thinks it's a lot of baloney, but that's his problem." Now he began walking slowly around the lot, the rod resting in his fingers as he held it perpendicular to the ground.

When he had driven up earlier, they hadn't known what to expect. The thought of having to get a new well drilled was troublesome to say the least. Unlike town dwellers with town water service, people in the country are dependent on either the lake or a well for their water. It's the kind of thing you take for granted until you have trouble with it. And water is a necessity. With winter coming on they didn't want to have to worry about running out of water, so the decision was made.

"Let's get someone to witch it first," the husband had said. The phrase "witching for water" conjured up a picture of an elderly man, maybe dressed like a farmer with an old beat-up hat and thick boots, wandering over their property with a willow branch, his head lowered in concentration. But as the shiny pick-up, complete with chrome running boards, pulled into the drive, and a young man with his wife and three-year-old son in tow started walking toward the house, all preconceptions went out the window. Obviously water witchers were as varied as the birds of the air. All had something in common however; a deep respect for what they did and a slight awe that they were able to do it.

As he walked around looking for places to start, he told them how he had found out he had the gift. His grandfather, still witching into his 80's, had an impressive talent. He could find not only water under the ground, but other things as well. Mineral deposits and cable lines to name two more and for years he had been employed by Ontario Hydro to find the underground lines before any digging was done. But the grandson never took it very seriously until he watched his grandfather find a spot, tell the people how far down they'd find water and then saw it proven right when they hit water just where he had said they would. This happened on two more occasions and at that point he was convinced his father's father knew what he was doing. So he tried it, under the older man's guidance and sure enough, he could do it too.

"It was so strong in my grandfather, I've seen the skin on his hand all twisted for the rod pulling it," he told them. "I'm not as good as he was, but I've never been wrong yet. Some people find any kind of water. I know one fellow who witched and the people dug only to find they had dug up a septic line." He grinned at the embarrassment this must have caused "No," he continued, "I only find moving spring water. And really, that's all you want in a well anyway, right?" The husband and wife nodded in agreement, wondering if such a thing would be found within the boundaries of their small lot.

But the water witcher was confident enough. The cold fall wind whipped the leaves about them as they followed the young man from spot to spot. His wife and son stayed back by the house, enjoying a break from household routine and a chance to see another part of the county. They had seen him do this many times before it was as natural as strolling down a country lane.

Then he stopped. The end of the rod started moving and he stood patiently, watching it. First it made several small circles in the air and then dipped down toward the ground. He explained that every dip counted for a depth of three feet, and they all stood

'I know one fellow who witched and the people dug only to find they had dug up a frozen, counting the dips. That done, they continued on to another spot. The witcher was looking for several water sources so that the best in terms of locations and depth, could be chosen. Every once in a while his young son would start toward him only to be waylaid by the mother. The child was full of energy and all this standing around was not his idea of a good time. "I don't know how I do it," he said, now standing by a new spot. "I just know I can."

Finally, after more searching, the best location for the new well was decided upon. He assured them the water was about twelve feet below the surface, give or take five feet, but said they should drill at least fifty for a good supply. Their hands and faces were cold by now, for they had been out in that cold wind for well over an hour. Coffee sounded like an excellent idea so they went inside to warm up.

Next night the husband and wife were over at a neighbour's talking about their well trouble and having a new one witched the day before. Their neighbour, a long-time resident of the area, listened with great interest. Yes, he had heard it was truly amazing the gift some seemed to have for finding water. Then he mentioned another man he knew of who was often used to witch. This man however was a traditionalist and used only a willow branch.

"There's one problem with using Joe, though," the neighbour stated. "And this come from Joe's own mouth. Strange as it may seem, he can't witch worth a darn unless he'd had a bottle of whiskey first. Otherwise that willow will not move. But have him down the bottle and he can find water without fail. It make for a long session but then Joe's a very patient man. He'll take as long as necessary so to be sure the willow does its work."

Then the neighbour laughed, hitting the kitchen table with his hand in merriment. The husband and wife weren't sure which would be worse; no water of Joe's state as he began looking for it.

Are we old enough for suitcases?

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

WE'RE TAKING TRIP, and I'm trying to pack the suitcases. It's going to be a long day. There are serious decisions to be made. This is an eight-day trip, and we're allowed one and a half suitcases each. I don't know if I can cope.

What's the weather going to be like? We'll be spending a lot of time walking through Quebec City. And some time hiking in the bush somewhere. I've got to be ready for anything this time of year. How am I going to do that in a suitcase and a half?

It used to be so easy. The only place we every went years ago was up here to the cabin. (Please notice I never call it a cottage.) Two adults, three kids and two cats got everything they needed packed in boxes. All right, they were beer cases. The formula was easy. Three sets of clothing for warm weather and three sets for cool. All the nice compact boxes went on the car top carrier. All the extra stuff stayed, from year to year, in the cabin. We were strictly campers, and that's how we dressed. Period.

Up until last spring, we never owned a real piece of luggage. We had a couple of pathetic cardboard cases with no locks. If we really went someplace, we had to borrow suitcases. Even that happened only two or three times in all our thirty-three years together.

It's my fault. I'm not a traveller. I don't even know why. But for almost twenty years, this was the only place I wanted to get away to. And once we lived here, who needed to get away?

At least, that's how we felt for the first seven years. (Let's face it, Algonquin Park doesn't qualify as a long journey.) But now, we've got a yen to see some of this beautiful country everybody keeps raving on about. So, this year, we're touring the Ottawa Valley, Quebec City, and part of the St. Lawrence Seaway. Our regular travelling companions have arranged the itinerary, so I haven't got a clue where we're staying along the way. Dennis just told us to be prepared to hike, see quaint towns, shop, eat in maybe two spiffy restaurants, and just possible see a couple of whales. It being mid-October, we have to be ready for rain, snow Indian summer, a ferry boat trip, a couple of decent occasions. All in a suitcase and a half each. It's going to be tough.

Judy's getting a little worried as well. She's the chicken, cat, dog and plant sitter. Her list is two pages long. Things go a bit complicated this month. Sassy is still taking pills for his allergy. All those plants I put in the greenhouse need watering. And she'll have to remember to plug and unplug a fan on warm days. They'll be an awful lot of eggs to deal with. She was sitting across the table from me while I wrote out her list. She didn't say anything until I wrote down—empty mouse traps.

HOT PURSUIT: With an HHSS defender already grappling to bring him down, a Lindsay collegiate ballcarrier scampers to a first down during senior football action in Lindsay last Friday. The Redmen surged ahead in the fourth quarter to win 16-14 and go three and one on the season.

First game is a blowout

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.
by Chip Trueman

The parking lot at Dysart's community Centre was somewhat packed on Sunday night as the eight teams that make up the Men's Hockey League got the season rolling. Fan support was at an all time high. In the lobby it was standing room only — mainly because there were no chairs — but the multitudes of people did fill the foyer. Don't forget fans, you can redeem your vouchers for a free mock chicken submarine sandwich at any Mr. Luncheon Meat outlet in Canada. Thanks again for coming out!

Okay, eight teams means four games a night instead of three so I'll have to cut the commentary short and stick to "the facts please, just the facts." The first game of the season was a blowout to say the least. Elstone Motors, who have had a reputation for being hot early in the year, ripped Emmerson Lumber 14-3. The Lumbermen, who are usually no slouches either, were certainly suffering from an acute case of Maple-Leaf-itis. Motormen goals came from Tom Curry (with six — is that right?), Steve Roberts, Ed Davis, Andy Hodgson, Luke Schell and Ken Riley. Emmerson Lumber's three points came from Bill Whittaker, Chris Mawbey and Frank Powers, in that order.

The second game saw one of the new franchises, Vasey Insurance, take on one of the old franchises, Haliburton Lumber, the latter of course being the team that won the entire MHL Universal Championship Series last season. Not wanting to show up a newcomer to the group, the Lumbermen cordially allowed Vasey Insurance to win the match by a score of 5-4. Chris Hodgson, Roger Bain, Glen Coulter and Ryse Jenkins did the netting for Vasey's while Rod Sisson, Wade McInnes and Dan Curry collected points for Haliburton Lumber.

If you thought the first game was lopsided, check this out. Roberts-Austin Fuels burned Youngdale's Fuels by a score of 14-1. When the Exxon Corporation is finished cleaning up things in Alaska, they should come down and tidy up this spill. Slick boys, really slick! Roberts-Austin goals were shared by Kevin Phillips, Bob Woodcock, Derrell Stamp, Phil Barry, Dan Ambridge, and Yvon Gravel. Youngdale's loner came from John "never-say-die" Little.

The nightcap was a battle between two old rivals, Lindsay and Haliburton. The Redmen won 16-14.

Fourth-quarter offensive sees Redmen win 16-14

The HHSS senior Redmen put on an excellent display of offense in the fourth quarter to defeat Lindsay Collegiate 16-14 on Friday and move to three and one on the season.

The Redmen fell behind early in the game and had trouble containing LCVI's passing attack, but determined defense kept them in the game to set up the fourth quarter rally.

Haliburton fumbled on their first possession, and four plays later LCVI chalked up a touchdown, then followed up with a convert to lead 7-0.

LCVI continued to look strong, while the Redmen offensive unit could not put together a sustained drive. The defense kept the Redmen in the game, however, stopping LCVI on a goal line stand in the second quarter. Haliburton took over the ball on the three yard line and were aided by some good luck, as Ryan Timbers grabbed a fumbled ball and scampered 90 yards for a touchdown. The Redmen missed the convert but Brent Flood kicked a single later in the quarter to even the score at seven.

The Redmen chose to go against the wind in the third quarter and held LCVI off until a fumble late in the quarter gave LCVI possession at midfield. They marched down for a touchdown, and were good on the convert attempt to lead 14-7.

Early in the fourth quarter Brent Flood booted a single to narrow the gap to 14-8. Both teams dug in their cleats and kept each other from scoring, but late in the game LCVI fumbled on the 35 yard line, giving the Redmen the break they needed. They advanced for three first downs, and came agonizingly close to scoring when Sean Perrin threw a long strike that Brent Flood just failed to hang onto in the LCVI endzone. Facing second and 10, Perrin fired a short pass to Jeff Feero for a first down. He then went back to Flood, who made sure he hung on this time. With the score tied at 14, the Redmen opted to kick a single point convert for the win. The snap was high, however, and Flood was forced to scramble through the LCVI defenses to gain a two point conversion that put the game out of reach.

Outstanding players for the Redmen included Jeff Francis on defense, and Steve Davis, Brent Flood and Sean Perrin for the offense.

Juniors win

The Junior Redmen have been gaining experience and getting better with every outing, and they showed their ability impressively on Friday, defeating LCVI 12-6.

On the first possession, the Redmen's Chris Greenfield ran 70 yards for a touchdown. There was no other scoring in the first half.

Late in the fourth quarter Jay Hughes added another six points on a quarterback sweep to put the Juniors comfortably ahead. LCVI was not ready to be counted out, however. They capitalized on a Haliburton fumble to chalk up six, but it was a close as they could come.

The win was a major upset for the Redmen, since LCVI was undefeated in three starts going into the game. The Redmen must now win one of their final two games to ensure a berth in the playoffs.

Coach Gary Brohman said outstanding players included Jerry Cooper going both ways, Jay Hughes at quarterback, Chris Greenfield at running back, and the offensive line of Bart Whiting, end; Jeff Black, tackle, Greg Brohman, guard; Kevin Fairley, centre; Steve Coumbs, guard; Walt Griffin, tackle, and Reid Elstone, end.

Brohman also cited the kicking of Pete Van Leuween as a contributing factor in the win.

Girls field hockey assured 3rd place

The HHSS girls field hockey team earned three out of a possible four points last Wednesday in Lindsay to assure them of at least a second place finish in their league.

Abby Burk scored twice against Lakefield on crosses from Shannon Curry. A third unassisted drive by Curry went into the Lakefield net but was called back on a dangerous hit.

Nicki Vachon smothered a penalty stroke to earn the shutout in Haliburton's 2-0 win.

The final game was against St. Peter's who needed a win to bump Haliburton in the standings and take over second place. Haliburton's offense mounted several strong attacks in the close, hard-fought match. Lora Patton hit the goal post and was unable to convert a penalty stroke, while Nicki Vachon was

Lady Luck is not smiling when the Redmen lose 4-3

Lady luck frowned on the HHSS senior Redmen soccer team last Wednesday as they dropped a 4-3 decision to the visiting I.E. Weldon club.

The Redmen showed improvement in their defensive play, and worked hard to win, but luck was not on their side. Early in the game Weldon went ahead 1-0 when one of the Redmen headed the ball into his own net. And near the end of the first half, Haliburton mid fielder Chris Holliday-Rhodes was forced to leave the game with an eye injury after the ball flew up and struck him in a sideline scramble.

The Redmen played well for the rest of the game but could not put the ball in the Weldon net often enough to win.

Jan Haedicke scored two goals for Haliburton and Darryl Winder added a third in the 4-3 loss.

This Wednesday the Redmen will travel to Lindsay to meet LCVI, and must win to ensure a playoff spot.

Juniors shut out

The Junior Redmen also came out on the losing end of the scoreboard last Wednesday, as Weldon outplayed them to earn a 3-0 victory.

Play was generally even in the first half, but Haliburton was frustrated when they failed to capitalize on several scoring opportunities, missing shots at a virtually open net.

In the second half Weldon moved the ball downfield effectively, and capped their drives with three goals.

In spite of the loss, the Junior Redmen were bolstered by the strong play of Nico Haedicke, Kevin Buchanan, David Carr and Darren Parsons.

The Juniors will travel to Lindsay this Wednesday to meet LCVI in the final game of the regular season.

Surveyors redeemed

Curry Motors and Bishop and Wilson. After their lacklustre season in '88, the surveyors were definitely out to redeem themselves. It was a close game for two periods, but at the final bell Bishop and Wilson had scored 7 and Curry Motors just one. Surveyors' goal scorers included Dean Curry with four, Jim Winn, and Brian Black. Barry Boice took care of Kevin Finch's shutout, scoring Curry's only goal.

called on for steady goal tending duties.

The game ended in a scoreless draw, leaving the teams tied for second place in the standing, but Haliburton was awarded second place on a goal differential.

The local girls will advance to the Kawartha final to be played next Monday, October 23 in Peterborough.

Last Saturday the team travelled to Sunnybrook Park in Toronto where they participated in the annual School Girls tournament, facing off against teams from across southern Ontario. Although a severe thunderstorm cut the tournament short, the Haliburton girls were undefeated through four games, and were tied for second place in the standings when play was stopped. Nicki Vachon earned all four shutouts in the Haliburton net.

Oakwood's strength overpowers Novices

Haliburton's OMHA Spectra Novice hockey team took to the ice on Sunday, Oct. 15 for their first game of the new season, hosting a strong team from Oakwood.

In the first minute of the game Haliburton forced the play in the Oakwood end with a couple of close chances around the net. After that the more experienced, strong skating Oakwood team carried the

Goodbye hot summer, hello new curling season

by HILARY LANSDOWNE

When the last rocks were thrown down the ice in early April and the Curling Club closed its doors on another successful season, there were a few diehards who felt they wouldn't survive the long, boring, hot summer. Somehow, they managed and with the Club open evenings for practice this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, another season is about to begin.

A successful clinic, attended by most new curlers, was held at the Club last Saturday. Bob Colliver will be contacting those eligible first-time curlers so they may pick up their curling shoes and broom before the start of the regular season the week of October 23. Teams will be selected in the next few days and players will be called by Skips concerning teams and playing times/dates.

Dates to remember are: November 4; A one-day Club spiel organized by Bob McNaull (sign up in the clubhouse); November 25: A one-day Men's Earlybird spiel (sign up in the clubhouse, 16 teams).

Planner says residents' report not entirely accurate

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Anson, Hindon and Minden's planner has responded to resident Mary Anne Wilson's presentation on Ray Moore's proposed Minden Place Condominiums.

During last Thursday's council meeting, Moore, who is also reeve, declared a conflict of interest and left the chambers when council addressed planner Bob Lehman's letter. Moore needs an official plan amendment and rezoning to build a 56-unit condominium on the hill above the Rockcliffe Hotel fronting Newcastle and St. Germaine Streets.

"Ms. Wilson has made a number of statements which I feel require clarification," reads Lehman's letter of October 2.

Representing a delegation of more than 12 families against the proposed condominium, Wayne and Mary Anne Wilson approached council with an elaborate presentation at its September 28 meeting. Mrs. Wilson reported on a discussion with planner Lehman, saying she believes the information used for his planning report on the development was "slightly misleading and not representative of the proposal." Points from Mrs. Wilson's report, as well as Lehman's responses, are detailed as follows:

(1) According to Mrs. Wilson, while preparing his report and making recommendations on the development, Lehman "was not aware that the two shrubbed areas on the plan are, in fact, the homes of Dave Magee and Charlie Roberts. As a result he now feel that the proposed parking area adjacent to these properties is inappropriate and should be edged with a buffer of shrubs or a landscaped berm such that these families would not suffer an invasion of their privacy being surrounded by a busy parking lot."

Lehman's response: "I indicated that some buffering or landscaping should be provided. I did not suggest that the area should not be used for parking."

(2) "At the time that he reviewed the proposal, (Lehman) was not aware that a family's home was situated directly across from the roadway to this complex. As a result, he now does not feel this would be an appropriate location for that roadway."

Lehman's response: "I do not recall stating that the roadway location was inappropriate. I agreed with Ms. Wilson that there would be some impact on her property and that if the road could be relocated, it would be better. This comment was made in the general context of the need for specific topographic information and maximum road grades."

(3) "Mr. Lehman feels that since St. Germaine Street is a dead end street, the second access roadway should not also be on that street if it is to be an effective entrance (since there would be no access for emergency services if there is blockage where St. Germaine meets Newcastle)."

Lehman's response: "I did note that it would be difficult to provide a second entrance on St. Germaine because of the limited length of frontage. I did not conclude that the second access should not be on that street because it is a dead end."

(4) "Since there is a lack of parkland south of the Gull River, the development should provide park and playground facilities of its own."

Lehman's response: "I indicated that because of the general shortage of parkland south of the river, compared to the north, that it would be worth providing some play area on-site."

(5) "Depending on the type of commercial facilities to be included in this development, the required parking spaces would be a minimum of 25."

Lehman's response: "The parking requirements in bylaw 86-26 for general commercial uses are one space for every 27.5 metres."

No response was made to Mrs. Wilson's final point which states, "Mr. Lehman was not aware that the property directly south of the proposal was inhabited. He understood that this land was vacant. It is, in fact, the home of Fred and Illa Cooper."

Concluding his letter to council Lehman says, "I have no further comments to make other than those made in my earlier planning report. My position is that, given the conditions outlined in the report, the development is appropriate and should proceed."

The original report by municipal planner Bob Lehman supports the proposal, stating, "the property is an ideal location for the proposed use as it is near the commercial facilities of the downtown core and within walking distance of the local school, parks and medical facilities..."

"It also provides an appropriate use of otherwise unavailable lands and provides a much needed variety to the current housing types in Minden."

Another letter of October 2, from Moore's consultant, Barclay Taylor, indicates "Mr. Lehman has in fact made a site visit on this property and in light of this he may well be in a position to address council's specific questions."

Council held further discussion on the development proposal further until its October 26 meeting at 7:30 p.m., and has asked that Lehman and Ms. Taylor be in attendance. Official plan amendment and rezoning are necessary to allow construction of the one three-storey, 36-unit apartment and two two-storey, 10-unit apartment condominiums. Included in the proposal would be 750 square metres of commercial space fronting Newcastle Street.

During previous meetings, council stalled on a rezoning decision because it had no water and sewer capacity study, and members felt the complex needed a second vehicle access point and additional parking for a commercial unit.

Spectra Novices rally but can't keep Oakwood's pucks away from the net play with most of the action in the Haliburton end. With only one practice under their belts, Haliburton looked shaky, allowing Oakwood to score three times in the first period and six more times in the second period. Finally, in the first minute of the third period, Matthew Burk got untracked as he carried the puck out over the Haliburton blueline, outdistanced the Oakwood skaters and deked the goalie to put Haliburton on the scoresheet. Three minutes later newcomer Cole Glendenning cleared the puck to Burk at the Haliburton blueline for a repeat performance that gave the local boys their second goal.

Oakwood came back with two more goals in the third to end the game 11-2 in their favour.

With little practice in the early season Haliburton is off to a slow start, but the coaches and players are confident that as they practice and gain experience they will be a contender by season's end.

This year the OMHA Spectra Novice team has only Matthew Burk returning from last year, and consists of: Andrew Baker, goal; defencemen Drew Robertson, Andrew Burtch, Ryan O'Neill, Devon Dart; Centres Matthew Burk, Greg Forgrave; and Wingers Michael Craigen, Cole Glendenning, Mike Morissette, Andrew Postlethwaite and Jason Henry.

OLD FASHIONED SERVICE IS A PRICELESS COMPONENT OF EVERYTHING WE SELL

Photographic journey is a celebration of old age

AT THE GALLERY

by Elene J. Freer

THE OCTO PROJECT: A CELEBRATION OF AGE is a photographic celebration and documentation of the life and times of people who were born in the 19th century.

Kitchener photographers Dyan Jones and her late husband Michael, travelled across Canada photographing and speaking with people who were over eighty-eight years of age. After six months of travelling, Dyan and Michael interviewed and photographed 50 Canadians born before the turn of the century. They spoke with the last living Kwakiutl Princess on Vancouver Island; Sara Breithaupt who remembered watching the Wright brothers in flight while on a vacation in Massachusetts; Joe Chase, now 101 years of age, who was a Olympic torchbearer; Mabel McGuire, whose doctor told her over half a century ago to eat onions to ward off black-throat diphtheria and who still eats them faithfully. The oldest person they interviewed was Isabel Bruckebark of Walkerton, 107 years old. During this project, Dyan discovered that "people have very sensory memories." A man in Kingston could remember the smell of August heat and dust in the schoolroom from the years when school started on the third Monday in August.

Dyan and Michael Jones considered one of the major goals of this project has been "to provide our children with a document that preserves as much as humanly possible the words and images of a group of people who lived in a time period many of us have never experienced. It is a photographic and anthropological study into the last wilderness of an ancient but still living human society."

The show opens at the Rails' End Gallery on Saturday, October 21st and continues until Saturday, November 18th. The public is warmly invited to meet Dyan Jones on Saturday, October 21st between 1 PM and 4 PM.

Meanwhile, Monica Johnston will also have a show at the gallery from October 7 to November 18.

Deriving her inspiration from the early periods of Japanese, African and North American Native cultures, Johnston beautifully blends together colour, pattern and form in exquisite porcelain vessels.

For Monica, the surface of each newly formed porcelain vessel is like a painter's canvas giving her freedom to explore her fascination with lines, birds, plant life and geometric patterning. Once the images and designs are carved into the surface of each vessel, earthenware glazes are brushed on to enhance the colour the decoration. The pieces are then bisque fired to mature the glazes and harden the clay so that they will withstand the smoking process. The vessels are smoke fired by placing them in a garbage can with burning sawdust and newspapers. The last step in finishing the work is to clean them. The excess carbon is removed by scrubbing with steel wool and cleaner.

The public is warmly invited to meet Monica Johnston on Saturday, October 21 between 1 PM and 4 PM. For further information, please call the Rails' End Gallery at 705/457-2330.

The Rails' End Gallery is housed in a historic, century-old railway station located in the heart of the village of Haliburton.

The gallery is open to the public from Tuesday to Saturday, between 10 AM and 5 PM.

Leander Gole, born May 21, 1887 in West Montrose, became a blacksmith when he was 17.

Groups to plan workshops

GUILD NOTES

by Virginia Muenzel

WE MUST APOLOGIZE for the lack of Guild news lately. Everyone has been very busy trying to organize themselves and their fall activities. But now we have lots to tell you.

There will soon be some space made available in the Gallery for more Guild activities. All Guild groups have been invited to have their meetings at the Gallery. A new coffee maker and electric tea kettle will be purchased, and the kitchenette area opened for use. As soon as the vestibule doors are closed and well insulated for the season, the table and chairs will be set aside for Guild members' use.

From January 13 to February 10, the Guild groups are invited to use the Waiting Room to organize workshops and demonstrations of their various crafts. The Guild representatives will be discussing the details at your meetings. Or get in touch with Elene Freer at the Gallery, 457-2330.

Right now, it's time to prepare for the Christmas Sale. Entry forms are available at the Gallery. Guild groups are once again being encouraged to do decorations projects, that is donated small items.

The Garland Workshop has been scheduled for November 20, from 10 AM to 4 PM. participants

AHM council will not support environment committee

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A proposed environment committee of area residents will not receive the support of Anson, Hindon and Minden council, and councillors are questioning whether to change its current committee system.

On August 24, council was scheduled to vote on the committee proposed by Carnarvon resident Dr. Gordon Smith—who already has volunteer members—to assist the municipality in any decisions which would affect the environment. Since Reeve Ray Moore and councillor Lewis Stevens weren't present at the meeting, the decision was held over. During last Thursday's meeting, councillor Bob Sisson spoke out against the proposal.

"I don't wish to get involved in a Greenpeace-type of organization," he said. "I don't want to vote on it."

"You have the right if you don't wish to participate" in the committee, explained Reeve Ray Moore, who was in favour of the proposal. "But it's our local people who are on this committee, controlled by us. We're allowing these people to report to council, and I think it's a very good thing."

Moore said the committee would serve as a liaison, bringing the concerns of the people to council through regular reports. He said the group would report on any environment concerns, and mentioned the recent incident where more than 60 barrels were found at the bottom of Little Hawk Lake.

"Ideas come from people. That's what we need."

Councillor Mike Maher said he's concerned the committee would "slow down the (decision-making) process worse than it is already."

Sisson pointed out the municipality recently paid for a survey on the landfill sites. "I don't see what he's (Dr. Smith) going to add to it."

"But this committee only provides information," said Moore.

Deputy Reeve Bern Berry agreed with Maher and Sisson, saying council is already bogged down with too many committees. "We're creating another committee. They can have their own committee without our sanction."

"I'm reluctant to spend the time" with an environment committee,

Berry said. "I will listen to Mr. Smith, but as far as forming another committee, I don't agree."

"We have to look at (having) more councillors," said Moore. "You've got a council of seven people up in Haliburton (village) and they don't have all the problems we have."

Sisson suggested bringing back the ward system, which would also provide for representation in the Hall's Lake/Carnarvon area.

Council members have been finding it difficult to handle all their committees, said Moore. "I don't think the public is fully aware of the problems we have with our time schedules. We need more councillors to handle all our committees."

"How about having only one councillor per committee?" asked Sisson, saying having more than one councillor serves little purpose since only one can report to council on committee meetings.

Council will further discuss the issue.

Tory leader to speak in Lindsay

Provincial leader Andy Brandt will be the guest speaker at a provincial Progressive Conservative fund raising dinner in Lindsay on Friday night. The $100 a plate dinner will give party supporters an opportunity to meet the people in the running to take over the leadership of the party from Brandt, who is serving only as interim leader. They include Dianne Cunningham, Cam

Jackson, Mike Harris, Dennis Timbrell and Bob Runciman.

Under a new system adopted by the provincial PC's, the leader will be chosen by a vote among party members, rather than by delegates to a convention.

More information on the dinner can be obtained from riding association president Bev Hickson at 324-9959.

Residents support bikers

the much-maligned bikers.

"We never had one biker, or a lady biker at least, turn us down on the tickets," she said. "Some even bought three or four bops. They helped raise $700 toward a bus that weekend."

"Granted, they are very noisy," added Carol Emmerson, "but it's just for one night."

Collier stressed that a decision on whether the event should return was important, so brochures could be printed up. "We need an answer, then we'll work on the problems," he said.

No residents at the meeting spoke against the event, but council has received a few letters of objection. One from funeral director Gord Monk, whose property during that weekend incurred damages which have been paid for out of funds that were raised locally, said he has concerns.

Signed by Donna, Cameron, and Gord Monk, the letter also notes problems with traffic control, leading to interferences with a funeral procession and "the inability of bereaved families to use a facility to have a funeral at any time during the afternoon of said event..."

"If you, as a council, can guarantee us that we can carry on the course of our business without interruption, without inconveniencing families who are taxpayers in this area, and who ultimately should have first consideration, then we are willing to be co-operative and probably change our view regarding the event." The letter then requests a written guarantee that the Monk "property will be adequately protected in order to prevent a recurrence of the events of 1989."

Another letter opposing Ride For Sight comes from Minden OPP Detachment Commander Steve Adam. Although police from other detachments are called in for extra protection, "we are always on the edge of being unable to really control the crowds," says Adam.

"With the increasing population and year-round activity, our resources are presently strained to the limit," he says, adding that policing costs at the Minden event are approximately $75,000.

"Not only is it an added burden to the provincial taxpayer but in effect reduces police service throughout the county and the entire Peterborough district."

"I am not in any way attempting to detract from the cause. However, I feel that these problems should bear some weight when balancing the pros and cons of continued sponsoring of the 'RIDE.'"

But those supporting the event won over those against. While in the process of passing a resolution to allow the event to return, the question of which council member should be involved in organizing came up. Earlier in the discussion, Berry challenged Reeve Moore to take over the job. The deputy reeve had previously co-ordinated the event for three years.

"I appreciate your confidence in my ability, but you've done a good job," said Moore. "I'll be there if you need me."

When Reeve Moore received the resolution which slated him as co-ordinator, he spoke out in opposition.

"I will not permit this to be voted on," said Moore. "I haven't got the time to do this." He then said he would pass the job over Berry saying, "do a good job as you've done in the past three years."

Swans, beavers and an evil wizard

Enchanted Times

by AMANDA STEPHENSON

ONCE UPON A TIME, many years ago, in the time of princesses and princes, wizards and elves, there was a very evil wizard. He lived in an enchanted land in the middle of Haliburton County on Grass Lake. He wanted to conquer the world. Thorick was a very able magician. He had the ability to change his form to anything he desired. His favourite form was a striking black swan. By day he would fly to a kingdom of a newly widowed Queen. Taking advantage of her sorrow, he would attempt to bewitch and cajole her into marriage and more importantly gain control of the throne.

Three kingdoms had he tried. All three queens had refused him. In a bitter rage he kidnapped each queen's only child. Ransom was not the plan of the wizard. Punishment and grief to those who had rejected him and blocked his way to power, was his intent. The children he had stolen meant nothing to him and he quickly disposed of them by transforming them. Two became shy beaver. The third, a girl, he changed into a lovely white swan.

Each night by the light of the moon the three would recover their human forms and meet by the shores of the lake to plan their escape. But the hours were too short and escape futile.

Years passed and once more the wizard heard of a Queen needing a strong regent to help her reign her late husband's kingdom. Swiftly he changed into the black swan and flew off to woo the Queen. The lady was indeed impressed with the magnificent bird who landed in her private garden pond. Delighted, she spent the afternoon at the waterside, commenting on his beauty and regal air. But, when at last she did turn to go, the wizard regained his human form. Frightened and sensing evil, the queen quickly surrounded herself with guards and hastened to safety in her castle.

Seeing the throne slipping yet again from his grasp, the wizard sought and seized the prince of the kingdom. As he flew home he released the child over Grass Lake, transforming him as he did so into another white swan.

More years passed and the swans and beavers became fast and loyal friends. Now it so happened that a very wise old elf was passing by the wizard's kingdom. As he came upon Grass Lake late that afternoon, he decided to set up camp for the night. That evening he witnessed a very weird scene. Two swans landed on the lake and were greeted by two beaver. As they climbed onto the shore the four of them changed into human form.

The prince, who was a swan, came immediately to the elf and asked if in his wisdom he would know how to set them free of the evil spell. After much hesitation the elf acknowledged there was a way but that it would be a difficult task. Only by overtaking and killing the wizard while he was in the form of the black swan would they successfully break the curse.

All night as they huddled by the elf's fire, they listened and planned a battle to defeat evil. Early the next morning the elf moved on. He had no wish to see the dreadful fight that was going to take place the next night.

As evening approached the two swans flew towards the wizard's towering castle. The two beavers swiftly swan to join them. Unsuspecting, the great black swan flew from the castle tower. The white swans attacked, driving him down toward the water. The beaver snatched him with their sharp teeth and dove beneath the surface. The spell was broken.

Two young humans surfaced and with joyful shouts joined the prince and princess already on the shore. As you can well imagine, there was great rejoicing that night. Yet, in the calm of the morning they all agreed they would miss the peaceful life that they'd enjoyed on Grass Lake and the special friendship that had bonded them during the past years. They decided to remain and join forces in ruling the kingdom of Haliburton. To remind them of their pledge to reign fairly, they placed two beaver and two swans in Grass Lake.

Although their earthly lives have long since gone, the tradition of beaver and swans on Grass Lake has remained as each generation upheld the vision of good versus evil.

should bring lunch. Coffee and tea will be provided.

The entries for the Christmas Sale are due by November 17. All those interested in working at the sale should sign up as soon as possible. If you need some brushing up on handling sales, Elene or Leslie Tusch will be glad to help you.

The Guild is searching for Co-Convenors and an artistic director for the 1990 Summer Sale. It is a challenging, as well as a rewarding job. Anyone interested should contact Pearl Foster at 448-2041, Ginnie Muenzel at 754-2181, or the Gallery.

We also need a convenor and committee for the 1990 Art Auction. The Auction is a lot of fun. Elene is very helpful in securing donations from visiting artists for the events.

Rumour has it that a new Guild group may be formed. Apparently, Ruth Still and Catherine Denholm have been discussing the formation of a book review group. If anyone out there is interested, I'm sure Ruth or Catherine would love to know. Let the Gallery know and they will pass on the information.

Three of the Guild groups have been growing by leaps and bounds. The Rug Hookers have 34 members; the Weavers and Spinner have 31; and the Knitters have 31 members as well. Let's get those potters together!

Ruth Still, organizer of the Concert Series, reminds everyone of the Felix Possak group concert on Sunday, Oct. 29 at 7:30 at the Haliburton Legion. Tickets are $12 or $30 for the season.

The group performs an authentic program of songs and instrumentals

Emergency staff needs better care

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The provincial government will be responding to a report which says Ontario's air ambulance service is "poorly managed, short of aircraft and adequately trained staff, and needs to improve its inspection procedures," but Haliburton Hospital's nurse-administrator is also concerned about the way her staff is treated when accompanying patients.

Saturday's Globe and Mail says the Ministry of Health will act on many recommendations made in a scathing report, which was commissioned after seven people died in air ambulance crashes in the past year.

Haliburton nurse-administrator Marlene Bennett says there have never been safety problems on any of the flights involving Haliburton patients. This summer, a critically-injured patient was kept waiting for several hours, but there have been no mishaps on any of the helicopter or fixed-wing flights.

However, she has had problems getting her staff back to the hospital. Whenever a patient leaves the Haliburton Hospital, either a local doctor or nurse must accompany the patient. Helicopters can land at the hospital, but patients must be taken by land to Lindsay or Muskoka airports if a plane is being used. When upgrading at the Stanhope airport is completed, it is hoped ambulance planes can depart from there.

Once the patient is dropped off at the destination, the air ambulance does not return to Haliburton, so other transportation must be found for the Haliburton staff. Usually a taxi is hired (the cost can be $250) to drive the staff person back to Haliburton.

One winter, a nurse accompanied a patient to a Guelph hospital. (This also means replacement staff must be found at the Haliburton Hospital.) She was supposed to be flown back to Haliburton immediately. Instead, when she was dropped off at the Guelph airport, the plane had already left and she was told to wait for another.

The airport closed and the nurse was left, alone with all of her equipment, in a small, heated cubicle attached to the main terminal. There was a pay phone in the room, but it didn't work so she couldn't phone for assistance. The airport was a few kilometres from the city and there was no one else around. It wasn't until several hours later that she was on a flight home.

"It's awful but they don't seem to be concerned (for our staff)," says Bennett, who would like to see this problem also addressed by the province.

Violence in tales not reassuring

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE
Martha Perkins

nightmares about the next day. One nightmare was that he injurys the swan and gets shot 50 times with a machine gun."

"This is a story about a bunch of swans that live in Haliburton, Ontario. Haliburton is a peaceful place during the week, but on Saturdays, look out because it's party time. Everyone in Haliburton reserves Saturday for partying. Everyone knows that."

One of the swans is identified as the writer's mother. She and the father have divorced and she's now plotting to poison him. The father has remarried.

The boy, his friends and family are gathered at his house. The mother is upstairs with her poisons. They discover her in the act and when she runs towards the son, he shoots her.

"About two minutes later, everyone came running in wondering what happened. When they figured out what had happened they were all amazed."

"Then Stuart said, 'Nice shooting.'"

"He said that because on Kim's head was a happy face made by bullet holes. (My note: Apparently there's a popular t-shirt which has a picture of a happy face with an oozing bullet wound in its forehead.)"

"To celebrate the occasion the five of them had a huge party. Everyone was invited. From that day on they lived happily ever after. Without Kim of course!" — Ching Wan Doo the Running Pooh Dude (Ching for short) and his friends—Houndog, Stinky and babe—run into problems at the Tory Hill Airport and "the great jungles of Gooderham." They sound like a bunch of Rambos looking for people to shoot.

Another character is Mr. Partridge. "All he does is waterski, play badminton and get drunk on a couple of brews. And then after that all he does is BURP Didee Burp Burp burp burp! Oh bye the he only drinks labbattes blue. He makes his living by sitting on the street burping for money now tell me that isn't cheap!"

The action heats up: "Well just as we were getting off the plane Bang Splat boom Kaploowee babe got her head blown off by stinky himself. So duck pulls out his gun and ends his killing masquerade."

"Well (the female swan) hauled us out of the pit or what ever you want to call it well any way she started to lead us back to their base when Duck pulled out his hand gun. He told her to let us go or else. She figured that she would be smart and ask "or else what?" Bang, splat. She was dead. We untied ourselves and started to run. Then I got my head blown off at the shoulders by an AK47. Then Houndog got his body sprayed with bullets he dropped to the ground dead as a doorknob. The End."

Adults, I know, are forever bemoaning the mental state of youth. "What's the matter with kids today" has been heard from time immemorial. But I don't think I led that sheltered a childhood when I say children in my generation didn't think in such violent terms. Oh, we were still sometimes mean and nasty, but our actions didn't surpass drawing a line across the bedroom and telling your sister she couldn't come on your half.

I think television has definitely skewed a child's way of viewing the world. Violence isn't real, therefore death isn't real. You can get your head blown off by an AK47 and live to write the tale.

The entrants made me wonder how teachers deal with some of the things which cross their desk. If a story shows the child harbours resentment over family strife, should you notify the parents and say "Johnnie isn't dealing with your divorce very well"? If a young girl is already thinking of herself in terms of being a teenaged mother, do you tell her there are other ways to enjoy youth?

Perhaps parents should start paying more attention to what comes out of a child's imaginations. Writing gives us clues to the inner mechanisms of the soul and while we'll usually like the picture it gives us, some of its negative forces should be addressed early, before they are allowed to fester.

Cult leader admits to gory acts

Cult leader Roch "Moses" Theriault pleaded guilty last Tuesday to charges he hacked off a cult member's arm at a Burnt River commune on July 26. Three other members also entered guilty pleas to numerous assault charges in Lindsay Provincial Court.

Coboconk OPP recently ended a 10-month search for Theriault, 44, and Ant Hill Kids Doomsday Cult members Jacques Giguere, 36, Nicole Ruel, 32, and Chantal Labrie, 31. The four were found near their backwoods commune.

Even though they were urged to seek independent counsel before making any plea, speaking through a French translator, the cult members pleaded guilty in both remand and provincial court that day.

All four were convicted and sentenced to terms ranging from 18 months to 12 years, with Theriault receiving the latter. The convictions stem from a series of assaults suffered by Gabrielle Lavallee, 39, Theriault's former lover and nurse for the cult.

Lavallee's statement accused Theriault of ripping out eight of her teeth, slicing the tendons in her right hand, and cutting a two inch strip of flesh from her breast with a pair of kitchen scissors. He also hacked of her right arm with a kitchen knife and cleaver while her hand was impaled to the kitchen table with a knife. He later cauterized her stump and burned her repeatedly with a metal shaft that had been heated with a blowtorch.

When Lavallee pleaded for help during the assaults, other cult members held her down, court heard.

Ruel and Labrie were each sentenced to 18 months and two years less a day plus three years probation. Giguere was jailed for five years.

Highlands fighting water level policy for at least 25 years

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The more times change...

It seems Haliburton County residents are celebrating their 25th anniversary—at least—of being dissatisfied with the way neighbours take advantage of the Highlands' bountiful supply of water.

On Thursday, January 23, 1964, the Haliburton County Echo had a front-page headline which read: Dropping Water Levels Anger Haliburton C of C.

"Haliburton County is being bled to feed the arteries of the elite boat owners who use the (Trent-Severn) Waterway," the paper editorialized.

"If the heart of the Highlands is to play its role as the tourist area of Ontario, the life-blood must remain in sufficient quantities to make its lakes, rivers and streams navigable and supply the important fishing that summer residents enjoy," said

Verne Graham, the chairman of the newly-formed Chamber of Commerce conservation committee.

(Mr. Graham also supplied us with the newspaper, which had a press run of 2,062 copies and cost a nickel. However, before present-day readers get upset at the disproportionate rate of inflation, it should be noted the paper had only two pages.)

Action is needed, Mr. Graham cried in 1964. One of his suggestions was the formation of a conservation authority, something the county is still discussing 25 years later.

"The chairman said the authority

The helping hands of homemakers:

The challenge of our health care system, says provincial Health Minister Elinor Caplan, is to care for people in their homes. We've got too many people in institutions; Improved home care is the answer. And if she gets her way, it will be the alternative to building the proposed 18-bed continuing care unit. The addition to the Haliburton Hospital was to provide long-term medical care in a county with the highest percentage of senior citizens, enabling patients to stay as close to home and family is possible. Now these people are in hospitals in Peterborough and Toronto.

There are many home-care services already offered in the Highlands and as this is Homemaker Week, the Echo salutes this financially-beleaguered service. Demands increase; funding remains the same. But it's certainly not for the money these 27 dedicated women—and one man—spend their days helping 160 Highland residents remain as independent as possible. For many, it's simply the desire to be helpful to others.

A MAGNIFYING GLASS helps Gerald Le Boutillier see the picture of himself behind the wheel of his hand-crafted, mahogany boat which once took sightseers on tours of Lake Kashagawigamog. He remembers the way he had to scrimp and save to buy the expensive wood, yet revelling in the boat's beauty, he says it was more than worth it.

Just as he begins to chastise himself for having charged such a small fee for the rides, his hand begins to shake, his eyes close and the present imposes itself on his reverie. He's unable to hold the picture, let alone the carpenter's tools which neatly line the walls of his shed. Parkinson's Disease does

'She's just one of us,' Gerald LeBoutillier says of Red Cross homemaker Betty Berry. 'It's nice to know you're helping someone,' she says in return. 'A lot of clients really depend on you.'

'You have the feeling you really do a good deed,' says homemaker Elizabeth Altruz, here offering Travis Burke a candy while his mother, Terry, looks on. 'With Terry, you just have to watch out she doesn't do the job for you.'

Friendships grow when care shown

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THE RAPPORT BETWEEN Elizabeth Altruz and Terry Burke is warm and genuine. Together, they're like mother and daughter, sharing a cup of tea, pointing out all the little things that have to be done around the house, and laughing at three-and-a-half-year-old Travis Burke's antics.

In colder terms, the relationship is between a service provider and client. But that's just on paper. Mrs. Altruz and Mrs. Burke know that's not really how the Red Cross Homemaker Service has earned its high reputation. It's the people who have given homemakers their place of pride in the health care community.

Friendships aside, however, there's a part of Mrs. Burke which wishes there was no need—beyond personal enjoyment—for Mrs. Altruz to visit her home twice a week. Young, energetic, Mrs. Burke wishes her only excuse for having a homemaker was the rather rambunctious Travis.

Mrs. Burke definitely does not fit in well with the image of the elderly homemaker client wanting to stay at home for as long as possible. Constantly (and happily) getting up and down to answer Travis's requests, she instead is enjoying one of the high points of her life.

Yet most housework, such as vacuuming, cleaning the floor and ironing, is too strenuous for Mrs. Burke. Nine years ago, she was diagnosed as having Multiple Sclerosis, a mysterious neurological disease. The casing around the nerve end decays, and messages from the brain to the muscles don't always make it. Messages end up going to the wrong place, affecting muscle strength and co-ordination.

Sometimes people watching her walk must think she's drunk, she says. "I have no balance" and with the mixed-up messages to her muscles, her gait is often unsteady. Haliburtonians know Mrs. Burke doesn't drink and as for the others, well "they think what they want to."

But last winter, Mrs. Burke had a relapse. The V.O.N. provided home nursing care yet when she was back on her feet again, Mrs. Burke found housework exhausting. Since February she's had a homemaker, and since June, that homemaker has been Mrs. Altruz.

Mrs. Altruz is going through a transition period of her own. This spring she sold her business and wanted something more to do than drive the school bus every morning and afternoon. She had heard about the homemaker program and went to local supervisor Ruby Way to apply.

"I just thought I would like to help people stay at home," Mrs. Altruz says of her motivation.

As the interview drew to a close and Mrs. Way was outlining duties and responsibilities, the phone rang. Listening to the request coming from the person at the other end of the receiver, Mrs. Way looked at Mrs. Altruz and asked "Are you ready this afternoon?"

There's been no looking back (although unfortunately, Mrs. Altruz first client was a family friend who died a few weeks later of cancer.)

"It's rewarding," she says of the perks of the job. "You have a feeling you really do a good deed. Who knows, some day you might need help too."

When Mrs. Altruz first arrives at a client's house, she'll put out her "feelers." "You don't go in and just take over," she says. Instead, she gives clients

Government should recognize homemakers

this to you, he apologizes, half angry at his body for what he feels is betrayal.

Kashagawigamog—its waters and shores—have always provided Mr. LeBoutillier, 79, with his home and livelihood. Born next door to where he now lives with his wife Lizetta on North Kashagawigamog Lake Road, he's never been tempted to leave. And he definitely doesn't want to be forced away from it by old age.

Sitting at the kitchen table with the LeBoutilliers is Betty Berry, their Red Cross homemaker—"the loveliest girl we've ever had, a perfect girl."

"She's as honest as the day is long. She's just one of us. When she was here just a few days, we sure knew she was alright."

Such an assessment comes from Mr. LeBoutillier's appreciation of Mrs. Berry's twice-weekly visits. She'll clean the house, do the laundry and perhaps prepare lunch. None of these tasks Mr. LeBoutillier used to do anyway, but it gives his wife the opportunity to spend some time out in the garden, or go into town to pick up a few things without having to worry about her husband's safety. It's as much for Mrs. LeBoutillier as it is for Mr. LeBoutillier that Mrs. Berry's help is a godsend.

"I enjoy it," Mrs. LeBoutillier says of the visits. "It gives me someone to talk to different than Gerald."

"It's nice to know you're helping someone," Mrs. Berry says of why she likes being a homemaker. "I thought it was a good idea for people to stay in their homes—"

"It breaks everyone up if you have to leave," Mr. LeBoutillier breaks in, the thought of having to move to a hospital obviously a distressing one. "Oh it would be hell. I'd be lost, worried to death."

Who else knows of the pump's pernickety personality? Or can tell the handyman where everything is? What if the power goes out, the water pipes freeze, or the cat doesn't come home? Mr. LeBoutillier might not be able to do the things he could before getting Parkinson's, but he still has a role to play. (Besides that, he says, "it costs you money to bury you and I'm saving for a half-decent burial.")

"A lot of them really depend on you. They get very upset if you change from one home to another," Mrs. Berry says of her clients. And it's a good thing these people make her feel good about what she's doing, because she's not getting that positive feedback from the government.

"It would be nice if they would just say you're doing a good job," she says of one thing she expects from Queen's Park, especially with all this talk about the importance of home care. "Our patients thank us, but as far as the government goes, we're really nothing to them."

Mrs. Berry has been a Red Cross homemaker for nine years. She's been locked out of homes on wintry days, cooked in houses where the client has been cutting wood on the kitchen floor, and had battles of wills with head-strong clients who think no one can clean house as well as they could, if only they were able.

On the plus side, she's provided a sympathetic sounding board for elderly clients who tell her more than they tell their own families. She's formed long-standing friendships, and been praised for her good cheer and efficiency.

Yet after nine years, she's making the maximum of $6.35 an hour, only 50 cents more than a homemaker with two or three year's experience. (There's a cap on wages after four years.) That's not fair, she says, and her supervisors agree. However, they can't give money they don't have, and the system works because of the willingness of the homemakers to sacrifice a decent wage for the satisfaction of knowing they really matter in someone's life.

"A lot of people think we don't do that much," says Mrs. Berry, with Mrs. LeBoutillier, voice full of disbelief, chirping in "Is that right?"

Most of the homemaker's duties revolve around doing housework, essential to providing a clean and safe environment for clients. Meals for the week can be prepared and put in the freezer. Sometimes these tasks make all the difference between independence and going to a public home.

(This should by no means be meant to imply that everyone who lives in a home, such as Hyland Crest or Extencicare, is unhappy to be there. Or that these homes are forms of old-age purgatory. Many residents are more than happy to "give up housekeeping" and enjoy the companionship of other residents. The point being that living in their own home or a nursing home should be a choice, not something they are forced to do against their will.)

Now, as V.O.N. nurses are pressed for time, homemakers are also required to do such things as give clients a bath. Sometimes they provide mental health care, simply by breaking the pattern of loneliness.

The conditions the homemakers have to work under can also be quite strenuous. "In the winter, you sometimes have to leave your car along the side of the road and walk. Some places don't even have hydro—you do everything on the top of the stove. Other places we go in are a real mess."

And sometimes the clients resent the homemaker's presence. "Some don't like you taking over what they've done all these years. No matter how much you did, you wouldn't be doing enough to suit them."

The main thing to remember, Mrs. Berry says, is that you're not there to impose your way of doing things. "I don't think we should go into someone's house and try to change them. You can't say 'Do this or that.'"

She's often been sorely pressed to do just that. At one client's home, she'll just finish making the clean bed when the man will climb in, dirty boots and all. He's always been that way, and that way he will stay.

"I had another client who would leave you standing outside in the snow for half an hour, pounding on the door to get in—and then tell you to get out."

This women insisted that Mrs. Berry drive her into town to do some shopping. Mrs. Berry can do the shopping, or she can be a passenger as the client drives his or her own car, but the rules state she cannot have clients as passengers in her car.

A few times she's arrived at clients' homes and found they had died. She had to phone the undertaker and wait in the house until the ambulance or hearse arrived.

Death, of course, is a natural occurrence but sometimes it can be kept at bay by the homemaker reporting on a client's health to her supervisor, who in turn will notify the proper health care agencies. Perhaps V.O.N. service will be provided, or the person will be convinced it's in his or her best interests to move into a nursing home.

All in all, it adds up to the homemakers having a great deal of responsibility. "Front line" home care workers, they are the eyes, ears and helping hands of a benevolent society. But for people who would be dependent on their homemaking income, it does not offer enough enticement and unfortunately, there's a shortage of homemakers in Haliburton County.

If the government is truly committed to helping people stay in their homes, then it will have to do more to help the helpers.

Airport's first manager is ready to soar

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

EARTH-BOUND at the Stanhope Airport, Mike Carey will not be envious watching the planes taking off into the Highland skies. While the pilot checks his controls, Carey will be busy making sure operations on the ground are running smoothly and safely.

Carey is the airport's new—and first—airport manager, a position made essential when the runway was paved and upgraded this summer. The former grass strip scared off many pilots but now that landings will go off without a bump, it's expected many more pilots will make use of it.

The new manager's work experience may be as fresh as the pavement, but Carey brings with him three years of studying airport management and operations at Georgian College. He was finishing his last co-op work program at Kingston, his home town, when he heard Stanhope was looking for a manager. Eager to put his training to work full-time, Carey applied and was officially hired at last Wednesday's Stanhope council meeting. (His position, for now, is for six months. Council has received applications from four other parties interested in managing the airport—the Echo reported on Spectra Aviation owner Steve Wilcox's bid—but wanted someone immediately. Another hiring process may begin when Carey's contract expires.)

"It's going to be a really good experience," Carey said last Wednesday after the council meeting. "I've only heard good things about the area. The people have been great and it's not too far from home."

Interested in aviation since he was in high school, airport management seemed to be a logical career choice. "It was a different field and not many people were knowledgeable about it. I knew it would be a thing of the future—it's really picking up."

The intensive study/work program included instruction on inspecting aircraft operating areas, making sure they are free of all objects; what needs to be done at the airport when a plane lands and takes off; proper procedures and the strict rules governing air travel; and the series of codes and signals used to communicate between air and land.

Stanhope's airport may be small, but Carey expects it to be busy. "People are phoning right now to get in," and once word gets around, even more pilots will want to fly here. It may also become a station for emergency fixed-wing flights, servicing both the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals.

In the future, Carey hopes the airport will also be able to offer flight training. He's got 10 hours of flying experience and to get more, he first has to drive to Lindsay, Muskoka or Buttonville. Everyone will benefit by offering the same courses closer to home.

'It's going to be a really good experience,' says Mike Carey, who just graduated from Georgian College's Airport Management and Operations program. 'It's a career of the future.'

"He's going to be a great p.r. (public relations) man, promoting the airport," says Derek Rolfe, who now that Carey is at the airport full-time, is stepping down as safety officer.

"I've got mixed feelings about that," says one of the airport's mainstays for two decades. "It's one thing I've enjoyed doing."

Rolfe and the airport committee also have to decide what their new role will be with Carey as manager. Traditionally, the committee has spent a great amount of time running the airport and it will take a while to find a new niche.

"I'm not sure of the airport committee's duties now," says Rolfe. "We were the total governing body before but with a manager, that puts us in an odd position."

However, everyone recognizes the airport is now too big to be managed by a group of volunteers.

"The airport will function better by virtue of Mike being here," says Rolfe.

Township to have overall control of airport policies

When the Stanhope Airport opens at the end of this month, pilots will find more than the runway is new. Not only will they now be able to land in the winter, they'll find more services are being offered.

Because of the expected increase in demand, the township has hired its first full-time manager, Mike Carey, on a six-month basis. He will be at the airport from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday through Monday inclusive and be available after hours for scheduled flights.

The township will maintain overall control of the airport, establishing fee structures, policy directions and services such as snow removal from runways, a public terminal and office space.

Carey's on-site responsibilities are more extensive and he must:

- Inspect aircraft operating areas and other facilities. Additional inspections will be made, in poor weather conditions, during the winter months. Any hazards or deficiencies will either be rectified or reported to the Muskoka Flight Service;
- Keep a record of aircraft movements and activities;
- Provide fuel sales during attended hours and make arrangements for after-hour sales. The township will be given all records and receipts;
- Ensure the terminal building is cleaned and maintained to the satisfaction of the township;

chamber secretary-manager, termed the result of the weekend drop in water level in the Gull River 'an eyesore.'

"Mr. Craig laid blame for the situation on shoulders of the Orillia Hydro. He said although the com-the airport improvements would have been more wisely spent on such things as hospitals, Rolfe says if the $1-million wasn't spent here, it would be spent on another airport.

"We've been 17 years in the making for this so we feel (the money) is honey we've really been working for," says Rolfe. "It's Stanhope's contribution to the community."

- Make sure runways and other aircraft movement areas are maintained to Transport Canada and Ministry of Transportation Ontario standards;

- Direct aircraft to suitable tie-down areas and collecting fees as set by the township;

- Answer telephone calls relating to runway conditions, communicate with incoming aircraft and respond to requests for service outside regular hours. The township will supply a hand-held radio for convenience and safety while Carey is conducting runway inspections and/or maintenance;

- Supervise and control access of persons and vehicles to airport property and provide, at all times, for the safety and welfare of the flying and non-flying public;

- Enforce and meet all requirements of the Aeronautics Act and Regulations and all other statutes that are deemed to apply;

- Ensure a professional service and attitude at all times in dealing with and promoting the airport with the public, and make sure the public is fully aware that duties are being performed for the Township of Stanhope.

Either the township or Carey may terminate the contract on 30 days' notice. An extension of the contract may be granted by and at the discretion of the township at the end of the six-month period in accordance with requirements at the time. Other duties may be assigned by council through the clerk-administrator and the rate of pay is $10 an hour.

ty is by no means interested only in water levels problems. It also will concern itself with reforestation, conservation, promotion of natural resources and establishment of areas that will give the public free access to the many lakes in the area which have no public beach," the article says.

It continues: "Norman Craig,

chamber secretary-manager, termed the result of the weekend drop in water level in the Gull River 'an eyesore.'

"He said the 'little bit of a stream' passing for a lake at the weekends is very detrimental to tourist promotion."

"Mr. Craig laid blame for the situation on shoulders of the Orillia Hydro. He said although the commission has promised to try and maintain water levels it has failed miserably...

"It's a very bothersome problem... We have tried to fight the situation... so far without success," said Mr. Craig."

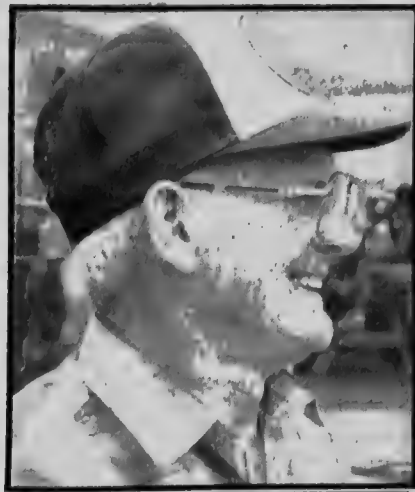

How would Mr. Craig feel today, knowing that the fight has still not been successful after all these years?

Homemaker befriends young mother time to warm up to and become comfortable with her. Often times, it's more important that she share a cup of tea with them than get all the ironing done.

"People need to talk to you and know that there's someone there who really cares for them," she says. One man, who'd had his homemakers frequently switched on him, didn't begin to open up until Mrs. Altruz kept coming back again and again.

So in many ways, the friendship which built up between her and Mrs. Burke is similar to the friendships she has with all her clients.

"It's not hard to work for people" and with Mrs. Burke, the task is particularly easy. "She gave me a great big smile and that was it."

"With Terry, you just have to watch out that she doesn't do the job for you."

Even Travis gets along well with this new grandmother. (Granted it's not out of need Travis wants another grandmother. Just on his mother's side, he has a great-great-grandmother, Rizpah Elstone, two great-grandmothers, and a grandmother.)

"He helps me do the vacuuming," Mrs. Altruz says. But she's learned he doesn't like any name beside Travis. "I'm not a sweetie," he once told her with typical boyishness. And he admits he'd rather help his dad, Rick, with the men's work about the farm.

"It means I don't have to tire myself," Mrs. Burke says of one of the reasons why she appreciates Mrs. Altruz's twice-weekly visits. It was supposed to be thrice-weekly in the summer, but staffing shortages have cut it down to two, four-hour visits. With a smile hinting that having a homemaker has its advantages, Mrs. Burke says that when faced with a housekeeping task, "If I don't feel like it, Elizabeth can do it. That means I don't have to ask my husband. I try to do what I can though. If I didn't, I wouldn't keep my strength up."

Up until a short while ago, Mrs. Burke had a job of her own. However, finding the stamina to work all the time, especially if she's standing, is impossible. Now she's trying to think of what jobs she could do at home. Besides the psychological benefits, a job would give her the resources to get involved with exercise programs, such as aquacize, which would help her keep her muscle tone.

It's not for the money Mrs. Altruz is a homemaker, either. "Homemakers are not paid for what they do. As rewarding as the job is, it's still quite a responsibility."

"First of all, we're not trained for all sicknesses. We're homemakers, but we're not nurses. When it comes to medication and therapy, there's just no way we can do it."

The positive repercussions of a homemaker's service should not be underestimated. Simple things can produce great benefits, and value cannot be measured by whether a task is "traditionally female," and therefore, traditionally low paid.

Perhaps Mrs. Altruz does treat Mrs. Burke as if the young mother was her own daughter. If so, Mrs. Burke is receiving care and attention money never could buy anyway.

Four new members join seniors

DORSET NEWS
by Phyllis Briscoe

A very happy birthday wish goes to David McKey who celebrates on October 14.

There was a good turnout for games night at the Dorset Senior Club with four new members joining the Club. Newcomers are always welcome. Tonight, there will be bingo.

On Wednesday, October 18 there is a special meeting. Donna Bailey, who coordinates the Haliburton Home Support Services, will give information and advice on how a system could be set up in this community whereby help would be available for anyone in an emergency or just needing some assistance on a temporary basis. One never knows when they may find themselves in a dilemma and don't know where to turn. This includes people of all ages, not only seniors, so come to this open meeting and discuss the situation with members of your community.

As usual, the community was inundated with folks making their last trip to the cottage and those who came to admire the beauty of the coloured foliage.

Eric Hamilton, of Toronto, was here for his annual fall visit to his summer home on Paint Lake, but has now returned to his Toronto apartment.

VICTORIA HALIBURTON HOUSING AUTHORITY
Gateway Plaza, 55 Mary Street W., Suite 203
Lindsay, Ontario K9V 5Z6

PRE-QUALIFICATION FOR DAY-DAY-DAY MAINTENANCE AND SHORT FORM TENDERS FOR:

Electrical, plumbing, heating, flooring, appliance repairs, washers, dryers and domestic refrigeration, glass repairs, roofing, landscaping, painting and general repairs.

The Victoria Haliburton Housing Authority invites proposals for pre-qualification of Contractors for Day-to-Day Maintenance for the above trades, in various projects, located in LINDSAY, BOBCAYGEON, OMEMEE, FENELON FALLS, MINDEN and HALIBURTON, Ontario. On the basis of rates set by the Victoria Haliburton Housing Authority, for a period of one year, commencing January 1, 1990 and ending December 1, 1990.

Contractors will be required to provide a service, responding to a telephone call from the Victoria Haliburton Housing Authority, Lindsay, Ontario.

Contractors, from time to time, may be asked to bid on Maintenance work on a Short Form Tender, from $4,000.00 to $15,000.00. It would be expected that the Contractors submitting their names will supply a bid.

Details and specifications, along with the necessary submission forms, may be obtained from the Victoria Haliburton Housing Authority office, Telephone 705-324-6401.

Submissions shall be received no later than Friday, December 1, 1989.

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SNOWDON

PUBLIC NOTICE

IN THE MATTER OF the Municipal Act in the matter of a proposed by-law of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon to stop up, close and convey that portion of the 66 foot original shore road allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to Chapter 302, Sec. 298 of the Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1980, as amended, that the Council of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon proposes to consider, and if deemed advisable, to pass at its regular meeting to be held at the Gelert Community Hall, Gelert, Ontario, on Monday, November 13, 1989 at 7:30 p.m., a by-law to Stop Up, Close and Convey those parcels of land more particularly described as follows:

FIRSTLY: Part of the 66 foot Original Shore Road Allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon, County of Haliburton, designated as PARTS 1, 2, 3, and 4 on a plan of survey prepared by C.T. Strongman, O.L.S., dated March 21, 1989.

SECONDLY: Part of the 66 foot Original Shore Road Allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon, County of Haliburton, designated as PARTS 1, 2, 3 and 4 on a plan of survey prepared by C.T. Strongman, O.L.S., dated December 29, 1988.

WHICH SAID plans of survey may be examined at the Municipal Office of the Township of Snowdon in Gelert, Ontario.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that before passing the said by-law at its meeting to be held at the time and place above mentioned, the Council of the Township of Snowdon shall then and there hear in person, or by his counsel, solicitor or agent, any person who claims that his land will be prejudicially affected by the said by-law and who applies to be heard.

DATED at the Township of Snowdon this 21st day of September, 1989.

Ernest A. Hills,
Clerk of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon

COBOCONK NEWS

by Sheila Lake

Winners in the Coboconk Seniors card games on Oct. 10 were Euchre: Hilda Chynoweth, Hazel Young, Leona Fountain, Hazel Young, Mary Button, Tom Bowins, Fred Wood, Tom Bowins, Ron Pearce. Bridge: Helen Gillies, Carol Anderson and Nada Potts.

Rose Rocchio was welcomed back by her many friends. This was her first time back since her recent surgery.

June Bradimore of Chelmsford spent a few days with her sister Sylvia Bowins recently. They also enjoyed a 10-day holiday to Daytona Beach, Florida. Dorothy Burrows, Joan Bowins and Barbara Carr also went on the trip. Barb's daughter, Peggy, flew to Orlando, Fla. where she rented a car to drive around, and joined her mother at Daytona Beach. The ladies enjoyed seeing Disney World and the usual tourists sights.

Barb and Ken Murchinson attended the wedding of her mother, Grace Pearson, who married Alfred Mole in a ceremony in Newcastle recently. A Reception was held at the Neil Murchinson's home in Newcastle. The newlyweds will live in Bowmanville.

Clayton Cameron of Minden and my husband attended a horse sale at Wooster, Ohio last weekend.

Little Andrew Angiers, son of Paul and Cheryl, has been in hospital, after surgery and is doing well.

Kelly Spry is in the St. Joseph's hospital in Peterborough, where she has had surgery. I understand Kelly will be there for a month so I'm sure she'd appreciate a card of cheer. Get well soon, both of you sick folk!

Also, on the sick list is Violet Greer, who is in Ross Memorial Hospital with heart problems. Hope you can soon be home, Violet!

Sterling and Jana Bowins of Brampton took his folks, Tom and Sylvia Bowins, and Jana's parents, Grant and Phyllis Pyburn, to the lovely Thanksgiving supper at Burnt River on Saturday. On Sunday, Tom and Sylvia enjoyed dinner with Jim and Nadeen Davidson and family at Cameron, and on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, they had dinner with Jim and Marilyn Bowins and family at Woodville.

Josephine Trotter of Apsley is the speaker at the October coffee hour meeting at Faith Tabernacle.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Murchinson, John and Mark, attended the funeral of the late Russell Patterson, who was Mark's god-father, at Acton.

Mr. David Murchinson and daughter, Janice of Mississauga, visited his parents, Ken and Barbara Murchinson over Thanksgiving weekend.

Mrs. Lillis Silverthorn of Lindsay was a recent visitor of Mrs. Ruth Gralick and Clara Schell.

Mrs. June Hall of Little Britain visited Mrs. Ruth Fralick and Clara Schell last week. Mrs. Hall had been visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Maybee, and new baby, in Fenelon Falls, and made a call this way before heading back home.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair Lake of Richmond Hill, and her sister Susie, and Mrs. Sheila Lake of Thornhill, were weekend visitors of Mrs. Cora Lake.

The Norland Opportunity Shop is closed until next summer. Before closing, they invited the Norland school children to come and take what ever they would like. With books, games puzzles, toques, sweaters and maybe a coffee mug for Mom, the kids had a great time doing some "face" shopping.

Mrs. Barbara Murchinson and Mrs. Helen Bradamore visited Helen's sister, Olive, in Lindsay on Wednesday. They also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Jones on Gov't Dock Road at Norland.

I enjoyed a visit and lunch with my sister, Dena White, at Ajax on Tuesday.

Mrs. Ada Fisher of Lindsay, Martin Ledig of Scarborough and Adam were Sunday supper visitors at our house.

50TH ANNIVERSARY: Bob and Bette Herlihey celebrated their 50th Wedding Anniversary, Saturday October 7th, 1989 at a cocktail party followed by dinner and dancing at PineStone Inn. The party was hosted by their children, Heather and John Judson, and Robert and Donna Herlihey and was attended by many relatives and friends both local and from as far away as Montreal, Ottawa and London.

Thanksgiving a time for feasts and visiting

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Winnifred Barnum

Dear readers: Another week has come and gone and we're nearly two weeks into October. How fast time passes.

As usual we had a tea Thursday, provided by the Ladies from Hunter Creek Estates. It was delicious and we appreciate their coming very much.

Thursday night we had bingo with Mabel and Deacon calling. It all went very smoothly. Those who were present thank them.

Friday was Happy Hour in the auditorium with Sadie Keitchman providing the entertainment for which we thank you sincerely. Congratulations to Marjory McIntosh who had a birthday October 6.

Lucy Burgess also had a birthday October 6. Her son, Rev. John Burgess, took Lucy out for lunch and we had a birthday cake in her honour at dinner.

Good wishes to Lula Ferrill who celebrated her birthday on October 9. Good wishes and good health in the future for each of you.

Monday afternoon Tom

McAllister called bingo for us. We thank him very much for helping us have an enjoyable day.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Marion showed films in the auditorium: "Living Color" and "Best Horse". They were both good movies. Thank you both.

Monday being Thanksgiving many of the Residents were out or had visitors. Mable Buttery's niece Shirley Warder took her for a ride to see the coloured leaves.

Mrs. Mary Oliver was out for dinner.

May Horsely was to her daughter Nila's Sunday and Marion's Monday.

Bob Mitchell was out for dinner Monday.

Rev. John Burgess had dinner with his wife and mother. Bob Smith had dinner with his mother Maron Rose. Myrtle O'Halloran had her son and wife with her for dinner. Pearl Lyle and her daughter Anna had dinner out Sunday.

A wedding dance was held for Kevin and Claudia Barnum in Haliburton

Saturday night in the arena. Kevin is my grandson so Roy and May (my sister), Jacqueline Yateman my niece took my to the party. We stayed at Wilda LaRue's over night. I went to Terry's for Thanksgiving on Sunday.

A lovely Thanksgiving dinner was served here at the Home, Monday night. Everyone enjoyed it and wish to thank kitchen staff very much.

Tuesday afternoon Doris and Linda took us on a bus ride down Deep Bay Road, to Moores Falls, up Hwy. 35 to Kinmount turn, then on County Road 1, to Birchtree Corners and back to Minden. It was a rainy day but there are still some beautiful coloured trees.

October 8 Ada Turrall had her grandson Allen Moulton and his wife Donna, and three children Erin, Drew, and Alanna from newmarket. She also had the children's other great grandmother, Mrs. Lydia Putrus, from Toronto to visit her. Ada's daughter, Edna Moulton, who had surgery in the Civic Hospital in Peterborough, came home Saturday, October 7, to Lutterworth (Hunter Creek) Estates in Minden. Ada is glad to say she is recovering satisfactorily.

Wednesday night Earl and Sid Cooper came, Earl played the piano and Sid the violin. Earl played the Mandolige and Sid the spoons. Eleanor came and played beautiful pieces the piano.

Boating rules explained at Soyers Lake meeting

The Soyers Lake Ratepayers' Association held its Annual Meeting at the PineStone Inn on Saturday, October 7. Lew McCarriston, President and chairman of the meeting, welcomed the 44 members and several guests including Gary and Janet Kapac from the Canning Lake Association.

Constable Mike Maybee, Marine Officer with the Minden O.P.P. detachment was the guest speaker. He provided information on boating safety, spiced with humour. He stated that the marine patrol puts in approximately 400 boating hours each summer, checking some 1300 to 1500 boats for safety equipment and alcohol. The reason for most injuries and deaths in boating accidents is lack of safety equipment such as life jackets, paddles or oars, a bailing bucket and a horn or other sound signalling system. Constable Maybee said. For distress signals he recommended a whistle since it can be fastened to the life jacket for use in the water and it stands out above the usual cottage noises and shouting. Members learned that the only vessels exempt from carrying paddles and bailers are windsurfers and jet skis, and that a float plane is a vessel until it is "on step" ready to take off, when it has right of way over boats. Constable Maybee answered questions on speed limit signs, notices prohibiting wake from boats, licensing and transfer of ownership, lights on canoes at night, and when a boat becomes a residence where alcohol can be consumed. He stated that new regulations are being drafted to replace the maze of regulations covering the newer types of craft. Next year the marine patrol boat will be repainted and unmarked but will still be equipped with radar and binoculars, he said.

Lake testing programme

The Association has participated since 1975 in the Ministry of the Environment's Self Help Program for testing lake water. This year, nine samples were collected by Ross Partridge, chairman of the pollution control committee. Unfortunately, no report has come back from the Ministry since 1987 on the condition of the lake based on the samples taken, he said. However, he indicated that according to Secchi disc readings the lake would now be classified as "moderately enriched with nutrients". He strongly urged property owners to take note of the increase in enrichment over the years, and to do all in their power to cut down the quantity of nutrients entering the lake.

Report on Dorset seminar

Ross Partridge and Bruce Birrell attended the first Conservation Seminar held at the Frost Centre in Dorset on August 18. Representing 55 cottagers' associations, 125 people attended, along with Rejeanne Anthon, President of F.O.C.A., and support staff and experts from the ministry.

Jean Anthon said that F.O.C.A. has a lake stewardship award, and cottage associations should be pressing local councils to encourage shoreline conservation. The protection of fish is important as an indicator of the health of our lakes, she said.

Points made by government officials were:

□ Conservation aims are to ensure that natural resources will survive and be used intelligently. People should think globally and act locally. Cottagers should consider themselves not owners of lakeshore property but custodians—labouring to preserve and conserve natural resources for our children and grandchildren.

□ Effluent from septic systems and nutrients such as phosphates and detergents promote the growth of algae and weeds which consume dissolved oxygen at the lake bottom, forcing cold water fish such as lake trout to higher levels where they eventually die.

□ Most fish spawn in areas less than 1 metre deep, usually near the shoreline which if disturbed can disrupt spawning as well as removing small rocks used by small fish to hide from predators.

□ The removal of rocks and disturbance of the lake bottom near the shore is now forbidden under penalty of a fine. The Ministry of the Environment should be consulted before working on your cottage shoreline, and can offer help and advice as well as literature on the subject. Keep your cottage lot as natural as possible.

Lakeshore road allowances

It was reported that in Minden as in many other municipalities, a number of property owners are considering purchasing the 66 foot lakeshore allowance abutting their property. One member reported that the Township would not allow him to add sand to his beach without first acquiring the 66 foot allowance.

Back lot development

According to press reports of discussions concerning back lot development, it has been suggested that the 1,000 foot minimum setback prescribed by Council be reduced to 400 feet. Association members raised concerns that such a reduction would lead to increased pollution of lakes from septic tank effluent, possible trespass by back lot owners seeking lake access, and the opening of unopened road allowances. It was noted that back lots around Soyers Lake are already being built on. One member opposed piecemeal changes in development planning and suggested that communication with Council be improved so that ratepayers might participate in planning processes affecting their property.

Neighbourhood watch

Two recent thefts were reported, one on Blairhampton Road where $15,000 worth of tools and construction materials was taken from a new cottage site, and the other on Soyers Lake Road where a Neighbourhood Watch sign was stolen.

Lake and map directory

Lynda Campbell, assisted by several other directors of the Association, was responsible for the successful Corn Roast and Regatta held on August 19. Sailing events were organized by Bob Thompson and June Partridge, and the children's games by Helen Lear. Members recorded a hearty vote of thanks to the organizers of this enjoyable event.

Constitution and by-laws

Neale Harris had prepared a draft Constitution and By-laws for the Association. These were reviewed and adopted unanimously by the membership, with a vote of thanks to Neale Harris for his work.

Haliburton Hospital expansion

A resolution was unanimously approved that the Association write to the Minister of health urging that the much-needed expansion of Haliburton Hospital be put in hand without further delay.

Other topics

Other topics discussed included the annual clearing of the beaver dam under Allsaw bridge, a proposal to remove some rocks from the Narrows to improve navigation, and the likelihood of a Fish Derby being held next year.

Seven Directors whose terms of office had expired were re-elected.

The Treasurer's report, presented by Neale Harris, was approved. It showed that approximately two-thirds of the members had paid their dues to date this year.

A vote of appreciation was recorded to the PineStone Inn for the complimentary coffee and cookies provided for the meeting.

The date of the 1990 Spring Meeting was set for the Saturday of the Victoria Day weekend at 7:30p.m.

Choosing the rural route—and how

COUNTY LIBRARY NEWS

by Joel Levis

LIFE AFTER THE CITY is just the guide to rural living for those of us who may not be sure of exactly what we want and exactly what we may get if we make to hasty a commitment to the non-city environment. The author made his break from the monoxide rat-race nearly 15 years ago and like to so many others, has never looked back. Maybe he was just fortunate but when you read what he has to say, you will agree that his approach was both logical and well considered.

Over the years, he has watched his friends and ex-neighbours struggle with their fat mortgages and the stresses of life in the fast track while he has never looked back.

"The smart money" he says, "is moving to the country" and in this book he tried to make holders of this lucre benefit from his own experiences and observations.

His entertaining and sensible approach has something for everyone from the newly retired to the young family unable to make it in the big town without spending their lives under crushing debt loads.

From Harrowsmith, and available through your local branch of the Haliburton County Public Library. Serving you since 1965!

THANK YOU

Hi—I'm home and convalescing. Now I would like to say thank you to my family, friends, and neighbours for calls, visits, cards, and floral and fruit arrangements I received while in the hospital and since coming home. Special thanks to my wife and family who were always there. To Gord and Joan for their continual hospitality, their home and nightly visits. Thanks to Hilda and Elaine for keeping the home fires burning and tending the cows and chickens. Thank you Preston for being your usual helpful and available self. Special thanks to Dr. Minor and the nurses in the I.C.U. and 4th floor of the Civic Hospital and the Haliburton doctors. Thank you to the Monmouth council and Legion Branch 624 for your kind remembrances. Thank you everyone. See you soon. Harry E. Clark.

27-P-18

IN MEMORIAM

MAUGHAN, WILLIAM In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away October 16, 1988.

When family ties are broken And loved ones have to part It leaves a wound that never heals And also a broken heart. So many things have happened Since you were called away. So many things to share with you Had you been left to stay. You never failed to do your best, Your heart was warm and tender, You lived your life for those you loved, And those you love remember. Sadly missed by wife Joyce and family.

32-P-18

EMMERSON, WILLIAM—In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, who passed away October 23, 1986.

Gone are the days we used to share, But in our hearts you are always there, The gates of memory will never close, We miss you more than anyone knows, With tender love and deep regret, We who love you will never forget.

Sadly missed by wife Lois, Cheryl, Kim, Laurene and Janice and families.

32-P-18

RIEL THOMAS—In loving memory of a dear husband, father, and grandfather. Who passed away Oct. 19, 1977. Sadly missed along life's way, Quietly remembered every day. No longer in our life to share, But in our hearts, he's always there.

Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by wife Inez and son Teddy.

32-P-18

IN MEMORIAM

ACKLEY—In loving memory of a dear Mother who passed away October 16, 1988.

A Mother's memory is more than gold. And a Mother's worth can never be told. A loving Mother good and kind. A beautiful memory left behind.

Sadly missed by Maxine and Preston MacDuff.
